More War, Says Shaw
Fine Marketing These Days
The Princess Weeps
The Donkey Died

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920.)

George Bernard Shaw believes war is coming between England and America. He says:

"War between England and America is therefore inevitable.

"Since the war it has been clear to everyone with any diplomatic flare that the United States must gravitate toward an alliance with Germany—war between an alliance of the centralized French republic with the British empire against an alliance of federated republicans of the United States with those of central Europe."

That is an extract from Shaw's article, to be published in the Hearst newspapers next Sunday.

With all respect to Shaw, it ought to be possible for the United States to avoid war by making the prospect too dangerous for any attacking nation or group of nations.

The right flock of flying machines, the right fleets on the water and under water, would enable the United States to mind its own business and make other people mind theirs without fighting about it. But it is an unpleasant fact that the great war that should have ended wars apparently opens the way to innumerable future quarrels.

Fighting is as contagious as the measles. Every statesman and bartender knows that.

In these days the big man goes to market—needs a new safe to hold new securities. Copper concerns, oil concerns, General Motors (greatest industrial concern in the country except one) are among bargains gathered in.

Occasionally, in old days, some prophet announced the end of the world. Then wise men bought real estate bargains from people that thought they wouldn't need land any more. The world did not end, the real estate buyers were the gainers.

So with an occasional cataclysm in the stock market. Fools think the world is coming to an end and sell at any price. The wise go marketing.

By and by it will be discovered that the world of Wall Street is not going to end. The wise men will have the stocks, the little lambs will have the experience.

There is a cry "in the heart" of some big speculator. He had borrowed ten millions on Sinclair Oil, which has recently done some sweet tumbling. The bargain hunters have also gathered in buyers of Chile Copper at the rate of 150,000 shares or more a day. Financial prediction for the next six months:

Bright sunshine for a few, stormy weather for the others.

Princess Troubetzkoy concludes, with tears, that she made a mistake in marrying "a commoner"—otherwise W. S. Schutz, prosperous citizen of Milwaukee.

The Princess, it seems, has an extra husband living, and Mr. Schutz is no polyandrist. While tears glisten the Princess asks: "What does it all matter? I may not be here long."

It does seem strange that Dido rampaged so violently on the beach, Heloise mourned so hard, Cassandra fussed so, Cleopatra had the snake bite her, and that so many conniption fits, since we are only soap bubbles, blown up, broken and forgotten.

Many things are vague in the future, but the tax proposition is not vague. It has been decided by those that pay big income taxes—they run the country—that the big income tax is a failure and the nation must go back to the good old plan of "letting the people carry the load."

The idea is one to make everybody contribute to the government one cent on every dollar spent, on the theory that nobody notices a cent given to the government, while the man who has to pay a million feels it keenly.

It has been shown that, for the present, in this country, high income taxes, excess profits taxes and similar efforts to make those that the government protects pay will not work. There have been issued now, in the United States, fifteen thousand million dollars' worth of securities, municipal bonds, State bonds, etc., on which the government can collect nothing. That means huge tax dodging. Untaxed stock dividends mean more dodging.

The load of taxation is going onto the backs of the little people and no one need be surprised.

It is La Fontaine's pleasant fable brought up to date. The plague was killing off the animals. The lion called a meeting, the beasts decided that, to placate angry divinity, some animal must die. With unanimous consent the donkey was chosen.

In the matter of taxation, the donkey is going to be chosen again, and after all he is used to it. He will bray, but carry the load, and presently forget that it is on him.

Fiume, Dec. 2.—Before I will agree to the despicable policy of opportunism which is debasing Italy today, whereby the enemies of Italy hope to hand over Fiume to Jugo-Slavia, I will myself press the button which is already prepared in my headquarters, which will explode a mine and blow up the entire city, myself with it.

WOMEN HELD IN CAFE SHOOTING

Young Delmont of Providence, Boxer, Near Death After Fight Over Girl

Providence, Dec. 2.—Stella Mauro, twenty-four years old, of No. 27 Cargill street, was taken into custody today as a material witness in connection with the probably fatal shooting of Young Delmont, a boxer, outside the Franklin cafe.

The young woman, whose arrest followed that of Mrs. Ida Bassette of New Bedford, furnished a motive for the shooting when she declared that Delmont had forcibly taken a ring from her some time ago.

Nichola Correlia, who left the cafe with the boxer, and who made his escape in an automobile following the shooting, is being sought as Young Delmont's assailant.

According to Miss Mauro's story, which was corroborated by Mrs. Bassette, the two were sitting with Correlia in the cafe when Young Delmont, whose real name is Jams Rufrano, entered their booth. The pugilist made some mention of the ring, according to Miss Mauro, and then said to Correlia: "If you want to see me, come outside."

WOMAN HEARS TWO SHOTS.

The woman said the two men left the cafe and she then heard two shots fired outside. She said she and Mrs. Bassette left the place hurriedly.

According to the police, Correlia was arrested here last Winter for assault with a dangerous weapon. He is alleged to have left the scene of Delmont's shooting with a companion in an automobile bearing a Rhode Island registry number.

The registry numbers of the automobile correspond to those of a car registered as owned by Herman P. Goldberg, of No. 39 Benefit street. Goldberg told the police that he sold his car recently to an automobile dealer on Columbus avenue, Boston. He said that the registration numbers, 38,129, were left on the car.

KEPT COMPANY WITH BOXER.

Correlia is described as being thirty-seven years old, five feet, six inches tall, 175 pounds, smooth face, dark complexioned.

Rufrano was removed to the Rhode Island Hospital in an ambulance. One of the bullets entered his abdomen and the other his right arm. He was operated on soon after reaching the hospital, but is not expected to live.

Mrs. Bassette told the police that she had been keeping company with Rufrano for about four weeks. The latter is a chauffeur and he had taken her out in an automobile several times, she said. She declared that she did not know the cause of the trouble between them, but acquaintances says that Rufrano was jealous of Correlia.

FIVE DIE IN NEW YORK FIRE

Concert Singer and Movie Actress Among Apartment House Victims

By International News Service.

New York, Dec. 2.—Five persons were burned to death today in a fire that wrecked a five-story apartment house in West Fifty-seventh street, just off Fifth Avenue.

More than 100 families living in nearby apartments and houses were driven into the street by the blaze.

THE DEAD.

Miss Marjorie Lescomb, twenty years old, a film actress from London.

Mrs. G. Boswell Reid, a concert singer from California.

Mrs. Reid's sister, who had been visiting her but whose name could not be learned.

Dr. F. M. Potter, attached to the staff of the Hippodrome Theatre.

Unidentified woman.

The fire started in a sub-cellar and spread upward through dumbwaiter shaft, trapping the fire victims on the third, fourth and fifth floors. The bodies were badly charred.

The blaze was discovered by Miss Annette Bracy, who lived on the third floor. As soon as she smelled smoke she hurled a book through a window of her bedroom and screamed for help. This aroused a family in an adjoining apartment house, who summoned the fire department.

Firemen said Miss Bracy's action probably saved a number of lives. Mrs. Irwin Coyle, summoned by Miss Bracy, aided in arousing a number of sleeping tenants until both Mrs. Coyle and Miss Bracy were forced from the building by the intense heat.

The unidentified victim was a young woman who had spent the night with Miss Lescomb. It is believed Miss Lescomb lost her life either in trying to save her companion or some valuables, for she was one of the persons awakened by Miss Bracy.

She was near safety when she dashed back into her room, where firemen later found the body of her friend. Miss Lescomb was suffocated only a few feet from the exit where many escaped.

John Grossberg, a broker, hung for half an hour on a narrow window ledge from which he was rescued by firemen.

Two British army officers, Captain H. Ross Martin and Captain William L. Hayes, escaped by plunging through the flames with blankets over their heads.

BACK BAY MAN HELD FOR SHOOTING PORTER

Wright Charles, colored, of No. 118 Dartmouth street, who gave himself up to the Back Bay police after shooting Louis G. Richards, aged twenty-eight, a porter, was arraigned in police court today on the charge of assault with intent to kill.

Richards, who lives at No. 178 Westland avenue, Cambridge, is in the City Hospital with two bullets in his body. His condition is serious.

The shooting, occured in the railroad yards back of the Hotel Lenox, and is said to have been the resiut of an old quarrel between the pair.

Ponzi May Be Freed In Less Than 2 Years

The question of just how much time Charles Ponzi will be forced to serve as a result of the five-year sentence imposed upon him Tuesday by Judge Hale, in United States court, has caused considerable comment. If Ponzi displays exemplary conduct during his term of imprisonment at Plymouth he will be eligible for parole in one year and eight months.

Under the Federal law he can be released on July 28, 1922, less than two years after the date his financial bubble burst. The Federal Parole laws allow the release of a prisoner on ticket of leave after one-third of his sentence has expired.

Ponzi's whole sentence is 60 months. One-third of that is 20 months and with good behavior he will possibly be freed in that time.

Nor will Ponzi lose his citizenship, as a result of his imprisonment. The laws provide that a person convicted of a felony shall lose his citizenship unless pardoned by the President and restored to full citizenship. Ponzi pleaded guilty to having committed a misdeamor, hence would not lose his rights.

It is doubtful, however, if Ponzi is a citizen. He was not long in the United States before he left the country and went to Canada where he was arrested and convicted.

He returned to the United States, but had not been here long before he was arrested in Northern New York for violation of the immigration laws and convicted and sentenced to the Federal prison at Atlanta.

Providing he was a citizen at that time, he lost his rights, for his offence then, that of smuggling Chinamen into the country, was a felony.

If Ponzi had been convicted in the State courts his five-year sentence would be almost completely served before he was granted his liberty. The State laws provided for one day off each month of a prisoner's sentence in the event of good behavior.

Her 'Little' Boy Was Bald-Headed Man

New York, Dec. 2.—An alleged small boy, a son by a former marriage of Dr. Eugenia G. Hancock, who turned out to be a bald-headed man, was one of the reasons set forth by Dr. Charles R. Hancock for his suit for marriage annulment.

In his complaint Dr. Hancock alleged that before he married her, in 1909, his wife had represented to him the son was a little boy. According to the husband, the little boy was as old as himself.

Mrs. Hancock, also a physician, who has counter-claimed for a separation, denied her husband's allegations of misconduct with another man and denied her son was as old as her husband. Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court signed an order directing Dr. Hancock to pay his wife $125 a month alimony and $600 counsel fees pending the outcome of his suit.

FIVE 'FIREBUGS' CONDEMNED

Dudley Street Arson Trust Gang Must Go to Prison, Says Supreme Court

Five members of the so-called "Dudley street arson trust," convicted after a sensational trial in 1918, must serve their terms in State Prison. The Supreme Court today overruled their exceptions.

The men are Jacob Smaller, Israel Leventhal, Jacob Leventhal, Simon Levine and Samuel Lischner.

They were sentenced to from seven to ten years each, and have been out on bail.

Following a trial lasting many days, they were convicted of a conspiracy to burn the apartment house at Nos. 235, 237 and 239 Dudley street.

The conspiracy was entered into early in February, 1916, according to the testimony.

The house was in the name of Levine's wife. Lischner had a second mortgage on it.

'Billie Black' Blames College Education for Theft in Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Admitting that she took some money from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' of Chicago while employed as cashier, but not $7,000, as charged in the complaint, and ascribing her defection from the path of honesty to her college education and the fact that $8 a week is insufficient to maintain one of her culture, Miss Alla Weisberg, sometimes known as "Billie Black," of Chicago and New York, is in the Cook County jail.

Her "suite" was prepared for her immediately upon her arrival from New York in the custody of Police Matron Lillard, who arrested her there last week after a search of several months.

She made the following statement: "I took some money all right, but I didn't take $7,000." Miss Weisberg said when put into a cell: "What else is a girl with a college education going to do when she can only get $8 a week working?"

ALLEN'S MEN AT WORK ON BOOKS

$30,700,000 Tied Up in Four Trust Companies Closed by Bank Examiner

Announcement that the depositors and other creditors of the four Boston trust companies closed by order of the State will be unable to obtain any of their money for four months at least was made today by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen.

Mr. Allen's statement dissipates the hope of the depositors that they would be able to secure their funds for the Christmas holiday season and disposes of any assumption that any or all of the trust companies have any immediate prospect of reopening.

His department today estimated that $30,700,000, representing the investments of 80,000 depositors and other claimants, is tied up in the Fidelity, Cosmopolitan, Hanover and Prudential Trust Companies.

While expressing his regret that the embarrassment of so many depositors will continue and that exceptions cannot be made even in unusual cases of straitened circumstances, Mr. Allen said that no other course is left open by the State's banking laws, under which he is obliged to proceed.

CLAIMS MUST BE PROVED.

A squad of bank examiners is at work in each institution on the resources and liabilities, attempting to establish the value of the loans made by the banks before they were taken over by the State. Until the value of those resources is definitely established and until the claims of the depositors and other creditors are finally ascertained, there will be no accurate basis on which to dispose of the assets among the creditors, Mr. Allen said.

Every outstanding note and other obligation to the banks must be paid in cash before their actual value will be definitely known, he said, or some group of men financially responsible must come forward with an offer to liquidate the assets.

"And before the payments can begin," Commissioner Allen said, "the depositors and other creditors must make ample proof of their claims."

In order to expedite the proving of claims, Commissioner Allen's staff is now preparing claim sheets which will be mailed to all the many thousands of depositors in the four banks. The claim sheets are now being printed, the clerical force is already addressing the envelopes to the creditors and the first batch will go into the mails in about ten days or two weeks.

From a date soon to be announced by Commissioner Allen, the claimants will have ninety days in which to set forth proof of the claims.

The ten days or two weeks necessary for the preparation of the envelopes and mailing and the ninety days for the filing and proving of claims will require all but two weeks of the four months estimated by Commissioner Allen. Disputed claims will exact more time and, finally, a detailed computation of resources and liabilities must be made for submission to the courts for approval.

FOUR MONTHS IS MINIMUM.

Mr. Allen asked that it be made clear that the four months is a minimum estimate. He said that the law which guides his course in the situation provides:

"The bank commissioner shall cause to be published weekly for three consecutive months, in such newspapers as he may direct, a notice calling on all persons who may have claims against such (closed) bank to present the same to the bank commissioner and to make legal proof thereof at a place and at a time, not earlier than the last day of publication, to be therein specified. The bank commissioner shall mail a notice to all persons whose names appear as creditors upon the books of the bank, so far as their addresses are known.

"If the bank commissioner doubts the justice and validity of any claim he may reject the same and serve notice of such objection upon the claimant either by mail or person. An affidavit of service of such notice, which shall be prima facie evidence thereof, shall be filed with the bank commissioner.

"An action upon the claim so rejected shall not be entertained unless brought within six months after such service. Claims presented after the expiration of the time specified in the notice to creditors shall be entitled to share in the distribution only to the extent of the assets in the hands of the bank commissioner equitably applicable thereto.

TO LIST CLAIMS FULLY.

"Upon the expiration of the time fixed for the presentation of claims, the bank commissioner shall make in duplicate a full and complete list of the claims presented, including and specifying such claims as have been rejected by him.

"One of said lists shall be filed in the office of the bank commissioner and the other in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for the county in which the principal office of the bank is located.

"Thereafter the bank commissioner shall make and file in said offices, at least fifteen days before every application to the courts for leave to declare a dividend, a supplementary list of the claims presented since the last preceding list was filed, including and specifying such claims as have been rejected by him, and, in any event, he shall make and file the said list at least once in every six months after the filing of the original list, so long as he shall remain in possession of the property and business of the bank. Said inventory and said list shall be open to inspection at all reasonable times."

The "dividends" referred to, for which a court order must be obtained to allow payment, are the resources to be shared among the depositors and other creditors. Mr. Allen has taken up with a committee of the Legislature a change in the law to enable him to begin the proving of claims without waiting for "the last day of publication."

Hub Student's Sister to Wed Siam King

Charles Sidhyakorn, a student at Chauncey Hall, has announced to Boston friends the engagement of his sister, Wanvinal, to King Rama VI. of Siam.

Sidhyakorn, himself a Siamese nobleman, will become a powerful figure at the court of Bangkok by the alliance.

He did not disclose his relationship to Wanvinal Sidhyakorn until American newspapers had told of the engagement.

King Rama is a modern and progressive ruler, and when he ascended the throne announced he would not take more than one wife. He has stuck to his determination. He is forty years old and his bride-to-be twenty-seven.

Sidhyakorn's father was of the nobility. His mother was of the people. He himself is entitled to be addressed as "Mom" in Siam. A "mom" is next to a prince. Young Sidhyakorn has been studying in Boston twenty-three months. He will enter Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

BRYAN IN FIGHT FOR MORALITY

Says Single Standard for Men and Women Is Next Big Issue for America

Washington, Dec. 2.—The next great issue to come before the American people, in the opinion of William Jennings Bryan, will be the question of a single standard of morality for men and women.

Bryan, he declares in a letter to the All-American Conference on Social Diseases, now in progress here, will do his level best to carry this "issue" to the front and keep it there.

"I urge the endorsement of the 'single standard,'" writes the Nebraskan, "no segregation of sin, no licensing of vice, the penalties for immorality enforced impartially against the two sexes. I hope to see Nebraska lead the fight.

"The women are here; their consciences are with us; thir influence will help us. How dare we longer discriminate against woman, and give to the immoral man a respectability we deny to her?

"Man and woman will stand side by side before the judgment bar of God; if they must stand on an equality there we should not give one of them an advantage over the other in the tribunals which man creates.

"On no other subject has man so cruelly misused woman; at no other time does he show such contempt for her higher qualities.

"Here, surely, is a cause in which every woman will be proud to enlist; and she may hope to call to her side all men—most of them coerced into active co-operation by conscience; the remainder shamed out of opposition to her plea for justice."

Curfew Law for All Southwest Ireland

By International News Service.

Dublin, Dec. 2.—The British government contemplates an extension of the military curfew throughout the whole southwestern part of Ireland, prohibiting people from leaving their homes at night, it was learned today.

Virtually all the important Irish cities are now under curfew regulations forbidding people from appearing on the streets after 10 o'clock at night. The chief reason for the extension of the curfew order is said to be the failure of the British police to capture important leaders of the Sinn Fein army whose arrest is sought.

The government has begun to try the hundreds of newly-arrested Sinn Fein prisoners by court-martial. Two of the prisoners who were acquitted late Wednesday were rearrested as they were leaving court.

Isaac Kelly, son of the lord mayor of Dublin, was arrested during the night. More than twenty additional arrests were made in this city by Black and Tan policemen on Wednesday. Street cars and automobiles were halted and searched and pedestrians were held up in the streets.

British Foreign Office Closed to Visitors

London, Dec. 2.—For the first time in years the gigantic iron gates of the Foreign Office were closed today to all but those having official business inside. This precaution was taken as a result of evidence discovered by the police in anti-Sinn Fein raids.

It is probable that Westminster Abbey may be closed to visitors. Scotland Yard officials said that "important names" had been found in the police raids.

BRITISH DRAFT BILL TO PROTECT DYE INDUSTRY

London, Dec. 2.—A bill to protect the British dye industry was introduced in the House of Commons today.

Silent Greeting for MacSwiney's Widow

New York, Dec 2.—The White Star liner Celtic, bearing Mrs. Terence MacSwiney, widow of the late Lord Mayor of Cork and his sister, Mary MacSwiney, will not reach Quarantine until late tomorrow afternoon. Many thought it might dock today, but thick weather the past two days is reported to have made travel slow. It may be dusk tomorrow before Mrs. MacSwiney sets foot on American soil.

The committee of women in charge of her reception plan to have a silent welcome because of Mrs. MacSwiney's bereavement. They admit that it may be difficult to suppress all sounds of demonstration, but the majority feel that a welcome devoid of cheers or other sounds and emphasized solely by the size and sympathy of the crowd will be far more impressive and solemn than a noisy reception.

A committee of more than one hundred representative women, mostly from New York, will go down the harbor on the police tug John F. Hylan to meet Mrs. MacSwiney and her sister-in-law at quarantine and they plan to bear her back with them and land at some central point best suited to accommodate the concourse of men and women which the police figure will greet the two women from Ireland.

The Battery has been suggested as the most spectacular landing point, but certain port and city authorities are said to be opposed to this plan. They think it would be better for Mrs. MacSwiney to make a landing at the White Star dock up the North river. This is a detail that will be settled today.

MANY OFFER TO SERVE.

The manner in which offers to serve on the women's committee poured into headquarters today from other cities indicated that the reception committee may be swelled to more than 200 before Mrs. MacSwiney's arrival.

Widespread interest is manifested in women's clubs and organizations. Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and Mrs. John F. Hylan, wife of the Mayor, are among the most enthusiastic workers on the women's committee. Former Congresswoman Jeanette Ranking is expected to head the committee.

Other prominent members are Mrs. Henry Villard of No. 525 Park avenue, New York; Miss Ann Withington of Boston, Miss Julia Emory of Washington, Mrs. William Johns Brown of Baltimore and Mrs. Tescan Bennett of Hartford, Ct. The committee and publicity headquarters at No. 17 East Thirty-eighth street is in charge of Katherine Leckie and it was a busy place today.

Telegrams were received from all parts of the country bearing words of greeting and sympathy for Mrs. MacSwiney. The following telegram from Mrs. John P. Grace, wife of the Mayor of Charleston, S. C., is an index of the messages received:

JOIN IN SPIRIT.

"Miss Katherine Leckie, No. 17 East Thirty-eighth street: Cannot be present in person to welcome the widow of Ireland's martyr, but let me gladly join in spirit with those who are there, not to share her grief, but to shine in the reflected glory of one who was the beloved of a saint of liberty. Please, on my behalf and on behalf of this city for which I know I speak, say to Mrs. MacSwiney upon her arrival that she has the sympathy and the envy of our noble women who inherit traditions of sorrow and recollections of martyrs who cruelly died at the hands of the same tyrant in our midst as the one who put her noble husband to death for the same cause."

Among those who called at headquarters today was Mrs. M. J. Harrington of No. 942 Andrew avenue, Highbridge, N. Y., who said she was a schoolmate of Mrs. MacSwiney when they were little girls in Cork. She will accompany the women's committee. Mrs. Edward F. Dunne, wife of the former Governor of Illinois, wired the committee today from Chicago that, although other duties made it impossible for her to greet Mrs. MacSwiney, she wished to express her profound sympathy with the purposes of the reception.

Many women voluntarily joined the committee today. Among them was Mrs. George H. Childs, president of the New York Women's Democratic State Committee. She asked that her name and those of Mrs. O'Leary and Mrs. Stanton be added to the women's committee.

Mrs. Stanton is vice-president of the New York Women's Democratic State Committee. The Italian societies of New York today named three representatives to meet Mrs. MacSwiney.

COLORED WOMEN JOIN.

WAR THREAT BY D'ANNUNZIO

Fiume tomorrow unless the Italian government backs down.

General Cavaiglia, commander of the government troops in Istria that are blockading Fiume, has warned d'Annunzio's legionnaires to retire from the islands of Arbe and Veglia, which they recently seized in defiance of Rome's wishes.

The Mayor of Fiume has addressed a letter to the press denouncing the Rapallo treaty (between Italy and Jugo-Slavia) and demanding annexation of Fiume by Italy.

A desperate situation has been created on the Adriatic littoral by the attitude of Gabrielle d'Annunzio, the firebrand poet-warrior of Italy. His threats are menacing the treaty which was recently negotiated by Italy and Jugo-Slavia settling the future status of Fiume and other disputed territory on the Adriatic.

D'Annunzio Started Revolt Over Year Ago

Gabriele D'Annunzio, already famed as poet, aviator, sailor and sybarite, jumped into the forefront of the Adriatic tangle immediately following the stand taken by President Wilson, who appealed to the Italian people over the heads of their elected officials, and made it seem probable that the long-desired Italia Irredenta, would be snatched from victorious Italy.

In the Summer of 1919 D'Annunzio, who had won a major's commission in the Italian army by his repeated acts of heroism during the war, resigned and immediately started a crusade for the annexation of Fiume to Italy. His action proved troublesome to the Italian government then negotiating with Wilson at the peace table. Efforts were made to call him off, but he refused to listen, and in September, 1919, at the head of a volunteer brigade of soldiers and sailors, entered and seized Fiume.

APPLAUDED BY PEOPLE.

His action was applauded by Italians all over the world, but bitterly denounced by diplomats and statesmen of the allied countries, as well as officers of the newly-created Jugo-Slavia and old Austria.

D'Annunzio, apparently caring nothing for all this, shortly declared war upon Jugo-Slavia, sent troops to seize islands in the Adriatic, captured Durazzo, chief port of Albania, announced that he was there as liberator for Montenegro and Dalmatia, and continued his demand that the government at Rome formally annex Fiume and the surrounding territory.

Acting upon the theory announced by Mr. Wilson in his self-determination point, the Italian government at last agreed to a plebiscite, but D'Annunzio, after listening to the preliminary steps, balked at the last minute, refusing to permit the vote, although all along he had declared that Fiume was Italian in population and sympathy.

Last August he declared that Fiume intended to expand and the following month proclaimed Fiume an independent state.

OCCUPIES ISLANDS.

Early last month his troops occupied the islands of Veglia and Arbe as a protest against the agreement which the Italian and Jugo-Slav governments had entered into. Later he also seized Castua, west of Fiume.

The agreement between Italy and Jugo-Slavia provided that the former renounce her claims to Italian Dalmatia, leaving about 30,000 Italians under the Serbian rule.

D'Annunzio's attitude was strongly condemned by the press of Italy.

November 30 a dispatch from Rome announced that the Italian government, wearied by the repeated embarrassments caused by the poet adventurer and his men, had ordered a movement of Italian troops under the command of General Caviglia to retake the islands of Viglia and Arbe.

D'Annunzio answered this by issuing a manifesto declaring that war was near and calling upon his troops for support.

MAYOR ASHLEY TO GREET BRITISH ELECTION DAY

New Bedford, Dec. 2.—Because he has promised to act as chairman of the committee to welcome H. M. S. Calcutta next Tuesday, Mayor C. S. Ashley will not be able to make his usual round of the polling places election day. The fight this year promises to be hot, with A. H. Harriman, Labor party candidate, making it a close race. Local politicians are wondering whether the Mayor's absence from the voting places and his presence at the Britannia day celebration will hurt him politically.

FREIGHT CAR SHORTAGE PRACTICALLY OVER

Washington, Dec. 2.—After more than a year of congestion and shortage of freight car equipment, the car service division of the American Railway Association today reported that in practically every branch of the service the supply of rolling stock now meets the demand. Officials of the roads attribute the return to a more normal condition to the improved operation of the roads and to the falling off of traffic.

'MAN WITHOUT COUNTRY' RELEASED IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 2.—[illegible] Ross, aged seventy, a man without a country, was released from Ellis Island today after the State Department had unsuccessfully tried for two years to find a country to which to deport him. Ross was arrested in an I. W. W. raid in Seattle. His name indicated that he was Scotch, but as he could not prove his birth in that country the British authorities refused to accept him.

SCIENCE SUITS LIKE UNITARIAN

Dedham Controversy of 100 Years Ago Recalled by Supreme Court Hearing

In some respects the Christian Science controversy, decision in which is pending in the Massachusetts Supreme Court, is anolgous to the great ecclesiastical case which arose in Dedham about the year 1820, and which brought to the front the Unitarian movement, then in its infancy.

The resultant decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court has since been authority throughout the United States on ecclesiastical law, Boston lawyers point out.

It also marked the departure from the old into the new era in Massachusetts, and with it ended all hope of the support of religion from the State, either directly or indirectly.

The trouble arose over a vote of the parish to settle Rev. Alvan Lamson as its minister against the protest of a majority of the members of the church, and involved a suspected theology that had been avowed openly hardly five years before.

Daniel Webster represented the Unitarians, who had chosen Dr. Lamson, and the Supreme Court held that "where a majority of the members of a Congregational church separate from the majority of the parish, those who remain, although a minority, constitute the church in such parish, and retain the rights and property belonging thereto."

Chief Justice Isaac Parker, who wrote the opinion of the full court, said: "The authority of the church should be of that invisible but powerful nature, which results from superior gravity, piety and devout example. It will then have its proper effect upon the congregation, who will cheerfully yield to the wishes of those who are best qualified to select the candidates.

"But as soon as it is challenged as a right it will be lost. The condition of the members of a church is thought to be hard, where the minister selected by the parish is not approved by them. This can only be because they are in a minority, and it is one part of the compensation paid for the many blessings from a state of society.

Has Tried 33 Jobs and Wants a Real One

John Gantzel of Lowell is out for a good job. Not that he is out of work—oh, no; but, ambitious to rise in the world, he would like something new. If you have a horse to barber and manicure, eggs to boil, or an insane relative to watch, John is not your man. He has done all these things—but let him tell it.

This is his letter, one of many received by James A. Moyer, director of the State Bureau of University Extension, from a pupil in free-hand drawing:

"Having read the article in the Boston American on your department, I think I may be so bold as to ask you to look into my record of past adventures. The lady taking a course in cooking who states her different past and present employments has nothing on me. I am not trying to jolly you or steal your valuable time, but would like to know if there is still hope for me, or am I a complete failure?

"Outside those few different employments," says the writer, "I have done odd jobs as signpainter, electrician, barber for human beings and horses (have trimmed hair on horses), laid concrete floor, do general repairing on house, tend to furnace, to drawings for course in freehand drawing, tap my shoes, first aid work in shop, had a job floorwalker once, and in spite of all my various adventures am still on the bottom of the ladder, and was without employment for three months last year. I have seen, by ship, France, England, India, Kiant-Chau, Stockholm and New York. The war interrupted and I landed in Boston."

WOMEN VOTED SAME AS MEN

Analysis of Election by The Suffragist Says They Failed to Initiate Reforms

Washington, Dec. 2.—In a final analysis of the woman vote in the recent elections the National Woman's Party reaches the conclusion that "Women apparently voted for the same reasons and were swayed by the same issues as men."

According to the analysis, which is to be published in the forthcoming issue of The Suffragist, information gathered in the crucial States shows that women cast from one-third to one-half of the total vote.

"In local matters," says the analysis, "women supported increased expenditures for schools for humane purposes, but did not generally initiate any reforms.

"Women candidates were few and almost invariably unsuccessful, with the exception of a few women elected to State legislatures or minor county offices."

When it was pointed out to Alice Paul today that the conclusions reached are similar to those published by the national association opposed to woman suffrage, she said:

"We contend that the election did not reflect the attitude of the women on the issue in the campaign, since they had no voice in making them and had no time to organize for independent action. Until the women vote acts as an organized force it cannot be clearly interpreted."

According to Ellnor Taylor Marsh, assistant editor of The Suffragist, who wrote the analysis, in many localities the women organized for independent action and did effective work in county and State elections.

The analysis touching on the vote in Maine says approximately 80,000 women voted in that State.

"'The League of Nations was the issue which resulted in the Republican victory in Maine, but women were not a deciding factor," it declares.

According to the information gathered in West Virginia, approximately 200,000 women, or 75 per cent. of those registered, went to the polls. The estimate from Louisiana is that 42 per cent. of the women eligible to vote cast their ballots. In South Dakota it is estimated that women cast about 40 per cent. of the total vote. In Vermont, 33 1-3 per cent. of the women registered, and of these from 75 to 85 per cent. voted.

Mrs. Smart Is Shocked at the Immodest Dresses

By KITTY PARSONS

Really, Gertie—I don't know what the world is coming to—I've just had a dreadful experience—I can't tell you how utterly shocked and grieved I am when I look about me and see the way the women dress—it's a perfect disgrace. . . . Well, I don't suppose anything has really happened, Gertie—nothing more than usual I mean.

I had occasion to go down to my husband's office this morning—of course I never think of going unless it is something extremely important, and this was a vital matter—Archie says he is going to sleep in the dining-table-bed tonight, and of course my mother-in-law is much too wide to fit in the bathtub, so I had to find out what was to be done about it.

MY DEAR, IT WAS SHOCKING!

. . . Oh, yes—we were talking about clothes. Well, when I saw Harry's new stenographer, I made up my mind at once that this thing has got to stop—my dear, I almost fainted—for a moment I thought I was in a ballroom; low neck, short sleeves and hardly any skirt at all. I was so excited I forgot all about my mother-in-law and the size of the bathtub, and I just told Harry that he would have to discharge that young woman, whether the firm like it or not—I won't have my husband work under any such influence as that.

. . . Well, I'll tell you, Gertie, it is up to us to settle this matter—the men will never do anything about it—no indeed! We women must band together and pass on all the girls who come to look for jobs in our husbands' offices—I intend to give the matter very serious consideration from this time—no more short skirts and bare knees shall come within my Harry's range of vision for a long, long time.

. . . No, Gertie, it isn't these backless backs and frontless fronts I object to so much as a lot of other things—going around half-clad in the daytime with the thermometer down to freezing and nothing on but a tissue paper waist and a . . . well, Gertie, of course I don't wear a petticoat myself—there isn't a woman on Boylston street who has looked sidewise at a petticoat for the last five years—you're carrying the thing too far, my dear—modesty is modesty within reason.

FEARS CHAPPED KNEES.

Of course everyone knows it is too expensive to dress decently any more—with materials so high and all that sort of thing. But I must say, I do think every woman can afford a pair of garters—if they continue to go through the Winter with this "chorus girl hitch" there will be many a chapped knee before Spring. . . . Well, Gertie, this is no time to mince words—it is a time for action—if we don't exert ourselves in behalf of our country pretty soon, the concerns for flannel underwear will go bankrupt before the year is out.

. . . Oh, don't you approve of high heels, Gertie? Of course for some people they are doubtless very injurious, but for my particular feet they are the only thing possible—my instep is so high and my whole foot so delicate that a heavy heel exhausts me—I can't bear anything of the kind—all highly strung people are that way, I imagine.

. . . Yes, Gertie, I agree with you about the hair—it is disgraceful the way the majority of women neglect it—there is nothing I hate more than a ratty looking head; every clean person knows that the hair should be combed at least twice a week—except when it has been dressed very becomingly and you leave it a few days longer. But then, in the present day women don't seem to care about such matters of refinement.

WILL HIRE THE WOMEN.

. . . Why, yes, I told Harry of my decision; and I spoke to the wives of some of the other men in the office and we have decided in future to hire all the female employes for the firm, without any assistance from the men. And they are to wear high necks and long sleeves and will not be allowed to powder their noses more than every two hours during business hours; there are a lot more things that we haven't worked out yet, but you can rest assured, Gertie, that the office will be a different place when we get through with it.

Then, we intend to begin on other places of business—I am considering making a rule that men shall never remove their coats in the office and must always rise when a woman passes through any part of the offices where they work—I'll let you know more about it after I speak to the Governor—I am sure he will appreciate such a wise an extemporary movement for the good of the Commonwealth—you know what I mean, Gertie. Now, I must run home and see what I can do about making the bath-tub more comfortable—it still leaks a little bit. Try to do your part for the women of the nation, Gertie—good-bye."

DR. BISHOP HELD AFTER RAID

Eighty-Year-Old Woman Charged With Performing Illegal Operation

Charged with performing an illegal operation and with having unlawfully in her possession the surgical instruments alleged to have been used in such operation, Mrs. Jane E. Bishop, eighty years old, of No. 142 Longwood avenue, Roxbury, was carried in a chair from her automobile to Judge Palmer's court room today.

Through her attorney, Clarence W. Rowley, she waived the reading of the complaint and pleaded not guilty. The case was set for December 29 and she was allowed to go on $1,000 bail.

She has figured in similar cases several times. In 1905 her name was mentioned in connection with the Susie Geary case, and it was at her establishment at No. 178A Tremont street, Boston, that Susie Geary was last seen alive.

When the Roxbury police raided her home yesterday they found four young women there. Two were in such condition they were rushed to the hospital. The others were questioned and sent home.

HARDING READY TO SEE WILSON

Conference on League Proposed; President 'Very Glad to Receive' Senator

Washington, Dec. 2.—President Wilson will be very glad to receive President-elect Harding during the latter's stay in Washington on his return from Panama, it was announced at the White House today.

By International News Service.

On Board Steamship Pastores, Dec. 2 (by wireless).—President-elect Harding has signified his willingness to confer with President Wilson upon the League of Nations, upon the former's arrival in Washington, next week, but will not seek a conference at the White House unless the President expresses a desire for it.

Better weather prevails and the Pastores is making good time. If the steamship arrives at Norfolk in time the President-elect will speak at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon at Newport News Saturday afternoon. He will attend a reception later and speak at a banquet in Norfolk on Saturday night.

In his speech at the Elks memorial at Bedford, Va., the President-elect is expected to pay tribute to the American soldier dead.

President-elect Harding expects to be in Washington on Monday when Congress convenes. He will immediately confer with Senator Lodge and others to arrange preliminary plans for the forthcoming League of Nations conference. Mr. Harding will visit the Senate and probably will be invited to speak, outlining his views and plans.

During his stay in Washington, the President-elect and Mrs. Harding will likely be guests of the McLean family.

TURKISH LEADER DEFIES BRITAIN

Enver Pasha Dclares War to Bitter End Whether Allies Revise Treaty or Not

The following interview with Enver Pasha, fiery leader of the Turkish Nationalists and an outstanding figure of the war, is timely in view of the disposition of the allied powers to revise the Sevres treaty in favor of Turkey as a lesson to Greece which has just recalled King Constantine from exile. Premier Lloyd George of Britain and Premier Leygues of France together with Count Sforza, Italian foreign minister, are now holding a conference in London dealing with the situation in the Orient and allied questions.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Dec. 2—"Turkey is the Ireland of the Orient. Like the Irish, the Turkish will either be free men and women or they will die fighting for the freedom and independence of their country and the right to govern themselves to which they have as inalienable a claim as any other people."

His face drawn and much thinner than when I saw him last and generally showing wear from the long journey from the Orient, Enver Pasha's eyes alone showed, as he spoke, that his faith and enthusiasm in his "cause" had not diminished.

"DEATH TO BRITISH RULE."

The Pasha was last heard of in Baku, at the edge of Persia. There, in the congress of the Central Asiatic Mohammedans, meeting with Russian Bolsheviki, the Turkish Nationalist and former minister, fired his countrymen and co-religionists with the cry:

"Death to British rule in Mohammedan countries."

"Ratification or non-ratification of the impossible Sevres treaty by the Constantinople government, the war will continue until the Turkish people have the freedom and independence to which they have the same right as any other people," he declared.

CAN HOLD OUT INDEFINITELY.

"When England and France undertook the task of 'pacifying' Turkey in the interest of their imperialism and exploitation, they engaged in an undertaking that will take longer than the span of life remaining to Premier Lloyd George, who shaped that policy."

Enver asserted that the Nationalists are able to hold out indefinitely in the interior and pointed out that Russia had held out three years under the allied blockade.

"Our bands are operating in the very outskirts of Constantinople," he said. "The Greeks may have penetrated fifty or sixty miles from the coast, but what will that avail them? The French are sick of it already and will be still more so when the guerrilla warfare in Syria gets under full way.

DISCOUNTS SOVIET AT END.

"The crusades proved the tenacity and endurance of the Turks and their love of country. That spirit is still in our people. Our necessities in the interior are few. We will see whether the tax-paying willingness of the British and French peoples to maintain armies in Turkey or the tenacity and endurance of the Turks will give way first."

Enver discountenanced the reports of impending dissolution of the Soviet in Russia, whence he has come.

"I saw no signs that would justify that conclusion," he declared. "The army is loyal. A most rigorous discipline prevails in it and it has first call on everything, food, clothing, etc. The Soviet government can stand the blockade for years yet."

ENGLAND, COMMON ENEMY.

Enver told of the conference in Baku where the Soviet government representatives headed by Zinovieff, chief of the Third Internationale, met delegates of Mohammedans from Turkey and Central Asia to discuss ways and means of fighting their common enemy—England.

Enver took occasion to explain to me that he was no Bolshevik or Communist nor were any of the Mohammedan delegations that went to Baku. This, he said, was made very plain to the Bolshevik representatives from Moscow.

"We joined the Bolsheviki and they us for just one reason—namely, that both of us are fighting for freedom and self-determination and that both have the same enemy—England.

"It was agreed that the Bolsheviki should engage in no propaganda among the Mohammedans in Central Asia.

Life Saved by Rival's Error

Mrs. Catherine Curtis, held in $100 bail in Lynn police court for assault and battery. She claims Mrs. Lillian E. Miner attempted to shoot her when she pleaded with her to discontinue her relations with Curtis.

Judge Henry T. Lummus, in the Lynn police court today continued until Saturday, the cases against Mrs. Lillian E. Miner, a divorcee, accused of assault with a deadly weapon, and Mrs. Catherine Curtis, wife of a former Boston police officer, charged with assault and battery.

Mrs. Miner was held in $500 and Mrs. Curtis in $100 bail.

According to the police who have investigated the charge that Mrs. Miner attempted to shoot Mrs. Curtis, a mistake by Mrs. Miner in placing a rim fire cartridge in a centre fire revolver alone saved Mrs. Curtis from death in the Lynn home of the former woman.

The detectives also declared that when searched in the Lynn police station a revolver was found upon Mrs. Miner.

Mrs. Curtis, who is the mother of thirteen children, told the court that she had gone to the home of Mrs. Miner to appeal to that woman to discontinue her alleged relations with Curtis.

She said that Mrs. Miner placed the muzzle of the revolver against her breast and pulled the trigger, but the gun failed to act, and Mrs. Curtis fled.

Mrs. Miner was not in court today, but was represented by J. Frank Williams, who asked for the continuance. Samuel A. Margiois, attorney for Mrs. Curtis, seconded this request, saying that there were certain letters which in his opinion violated the United States postal regulations, involved in the case, and he needed more time to investigate them.

The requests of both attorneys was granted.

CAPE DWELLERS FLEE FIRES

Cox Warns Hunters as Forest Flames Cause Ruin in Several Towns

Forest fires in which hundreds of acres of woodland were burned over and a number of cottages destroyed were smouldering today in Hyannis, Essex, Mattapoisett, Marion, North Attleboro and other Massachusetts towns.

Hundreds of volunteer fire-fighters were posted on the fire lines to prevent the spread of the flames.

Dwellers in isolated sections of Cape Cod were reported as having left dwellings located in the path of the fire and moved their families into the villages.

Acting Governor Channing H. Cox issued another proclamation to hunters, asking them to be careful about fire. If the hunters do not comply, the season may be summarily closed.

Four cottages on the Barnstable-Hyannis road were burned, the fire reaching the road through a thicket of dense underbrush. Several houses were saved only by heroic work by regular and volunteer firemen.

Four hundred acres were burned over in Hyannis. Timberland in Centreville and Craigville was damaged.

Volunteers stood guard, watch and watch about, in Dartmouth, Marion and Mattapoisett. In Dartmouth the fire burned a valuable lot of timber between Chase and Nickerson roads. The New Bedford fire department sent help.

Miss Anna Hamlin, daughter of Charles S. Hamlin of Boston, was again a leader of volunteer firewomen. She drove a big touring car along the fire lines, carrying men and equipment.

In Wickford the blaze was still smouldering dangerously. It crept uncomfortably close to the Wickford Junction railroad.

Other towns affected were Marblehead, South Braintree, North Adams, North Reading, Chelmsford, Middleton, Walpole, Wrentham and Stoughton.

Roses White and Red

The red rose of Lancaster lies peacefully beside the white rose of York in one of our show-cases. Forgotten are the days when they were emblazoned on the shields of opposing forces. Now one graces a beaded bag of radiant hue, while the other's clear white beauty is woven in a bag of softer colors.

Our bead bags are of unusual distinction. They are beautifully patterned and mounted in jeweled gold. Artistry is shown in every bit of the workmanship. They offer themselves as Christmas gifts sure to please. They come in a range of colors which permits considerable freedom in selection.

Every woman likes to have a good-looking bag or pocketbook. We have attractive brocaded and velvet bags with gold and silver mountings. Our leather purses and bags are unusually fascinating this Christmas. We are showing them in all the new shapes and shades. The range of prices is wide.

IRISH GIRLS' HAIR SHORN

Roxbury Man Back From Erin Tells of Atrocities; His Passport Scorned

"TAN" VICTIM

EDWARD F. GOODE

Removing finger and toe nails from young men, whipping old men and women, burning dwellings and highway robbery, are daily practices of the Black and Tans in Athlone, County Roscommon, according to Edward F. Goode of No. 2 Merton place, Roxbury, who just returned from Ireland.

He declared he was held up by the Black and Tans on Summer Hill, a quarter of a mile from Athlone, and robbed of his money despite the fact that he produced passports with his picture attached showing him to be an American citizen. He says he is willing to appear before any investigating committee in Washington or elsewhere and tell what he saw the Black and Tans do to defenseless men and women.

THREATENED WITH DEATH.

Goode visited Ireland February 5, 1920, and asserts that he was threatened with death several times. He reported the theft of his money to the American Consul at Southampton, England, and was told the matter would be looked into at the earliest possible moment.

"I was walking along Summer Hill and came face to face with a detachment of Black and Tans," said Goode. "They halted me with pointed guns. I protested that I was an American citizen and produced my passport. One said to me, 'what do we care if you are an American citizen.' With that others searched my pockets and removed my money.

"The Black and Tans are goading Irish people into bloodshed. Old men and women, from seventy to eighty years of age, are taken from their homes and scourged by soldiers for refusing to tell where their children are. Young men are driven from their homes and shot. Others are held up on the roadside and made to take off their shoes. While a guard stands by with a gun pointed at victims, the latter are tortured. Many of the Black and Tans were arrested in Athlone on the charge of robbery and are awaiting trial in jail.

GIRLS' HAIR SHORN.

"Michael Nolan was held up in a place called Drum and robbed of $275 and a check for 100 pounds. Nolan stopped payment of the check at the bank, but he lost the money. Girls are insulted by the Black and Tans after their hair is cut off. The soldiers went to the home of Patrick Ledwige in Moor, County Roscommon, and took all his clothing. Mounds of hay and bedding straw were burned and then used in setting fire to dwellings."

ADMITS MURDER OF PEIRCE

Treadway, in Confession to Philadelphia Police, Exonerates Pal and Sweetheart

By Universal Service.

Philadelphia, Dec. 2.—A twitching of the face, a sigh, a shrug of his shoulders, and then, in a low voice:

"I killed Peirce. Moss and Marie are innocent. You ought to let them go. I'm going to tell the whole truth now, and I am the only one to blame.

"I made sure he was dead. After Peirce dropped I knelt beside him and covered his face with a towel until he stopped breathing and I was sure he was dead. I guess that's how I got the blood stains on the knee of my trousers."

The above confession solved the brutal murder early in the morning of November 21 of Henry T. Peirce, prominent lodgeman, who was horribly beaten to death in his apartment at No. 2009 Market street.

The story was told by Peter D. Treadway, who, scorned by his sweetheart and abandoned by his pals, related the sordid details to Captain of Detectives Souder in the latter's office.

Confronted by his sweetheart, Marie Rogers, or Phillips, and a pal, Joseph A. Moss, whom he had formerly accused of the crime, Treadway confessed.

Protests Locking Up Wife with Jurors

By Universal Service.

Montclair, N. J., Dec. 2.—He was worried and he looked it. He fidgeted nervously in his seat. He had been excused from the jury and his wife was yet to be examined. The court was proceeding with the questions when he broke in.

"Pardon, judge, but there might be a rumpus in the neighborhood." The court was vexed. "I'm not opposed to these here mixed juries"—the court glared—"but is there a chance of the case being concluded in the daytime. Suppose the jury should fail to agree and my wife was on it."

"What of it?" thundered the court.

"Well, that is, would the jury be locked up all night? Honest, I would rather have my wife at home and not locked up overnight with a lot of men."

And so New Jersey's experiment with mixed juries may cause a "rumpus in the neighborhood."

Twelve women and sixteen men were summoned as likely candidates for a jury. In several instances a man and his wife were among those called and the court ruled that in such cases either the husband or the wife could be excused.

"You can keep my wife as long as you like but please relieve me," one husband asked. His wife was not within earshot at the time.

3 IN HAYES CASE DENY GUILT

Longe, Who Turned State's Evidence, Refuses to Hire Counsel; Silent on Trio

Rutland, Vt., Dec. 2.—Who murdered Owen Hayes of Fairhaven? A Boston American reporter interviewed the four suspects detained in the county jail at Middlebury and also talked with Leon Bishop, sweetheart of little Madeline Longe, who told the long, sordid tale of murder to the State authorities. The suspects made the following statements:

Herbert Lovell—It must be a frame-up. I know nothing about the affair and can prove that I was working on the night in question.

Lawrence Bardwell—I've been arrested and I did not hardly know what for until I read it in the papers.

Joseph Duffany—I'm a poor man, but I would never kill a man to get any money. People in Fairhaven know me and they know that I wouldn't commit such a terrible crime.

TURNS STATE EVIDENCE.

Peter Longe—Yes, I've turned State's evidence. I told the detectives and the State authorities the truth. I couldn't lie to them. I told everything I knew. I told the truth. They asked me a lot of questions and I answered 'em as best I could. I couldn't lie about it. They know everything.

When Longe was asked if his testimony concerned himself or the other three men alone, he refused to reply. The officials considered him as the ringleader, following the accusation by his daughter, but now that he has turned State's evidence, by his own admission, it appears that Lovell, a nineteen-year-old boy, will share the burden.

Lovell, Duffany and Bardwell have retained Jones & Jones of Rutland as counsel. Mr. Longe has stated that "he didn't think he would need counsel now that he had turned State's evidence." Joseph C. Jones, senior member of the firm was counsel for the defence of Byron Pettibone of Bennington in the recent wife poisoning trial.

Lovell, who has been described as a desperado traveling under pseudonyms, is an inoffensive youth of nineteen years. Today he sobbed in his cell as he greeted his aged grandmother who clung to him and said:

"Herbert, you know your old grandma will stand by you. I got a farm and a bank account and it's all yours, every cent of it goes into this case and if God Almighty sees your innocence and abides by his love for all good boys, you'll be free."

Mrs. Charles Lovell, the aged woman, owns a good-sized farm in Springfield, Vermont. She came to this city immediately upon hearing of her grandson's arrest.

Bardwell and Duffany both deny guilt. The case has resolved itself into a fight between Longe and the other three suspects. The entire proceedings has taken a queer twist since Madeline Longe told her first story. She said it "was father and his companions." Longe now apparently seeks freedom on the strength of his turning State's evidence.

So far, the only evidence which the prosecution has advanced is the tangled story of Madeline Longe, Peter's 15-year-old daughter. The defence has compiled a mass of data on which it is now working. Although undue influence is alleged to have been used upon the prisoners, nothing in the form of a confession has been made.

The story is daily growing into a complicated maze of switched stories, closed mouths and threads of evidence which will undoubtedly lead up to the greatest homicide mystery in the State of Vermont.

HAS 14 MURDER CASES.

Attorney-General Frank C. Archibald, who will prosecute, has fourteen murder cases on his hands at the present time. Joseph C. Jones has tried over twenty-five murder cases. The two lawyers are veterans at the State bar and both bear reputations of pugnacious shrewdness and of forceful and eloquent oratory.

State's Attorney P. M. M. Phelps is drawing up petitions which he will present to the Grand Jury which will be called shortly at the Rutland County Court House before either Judge Harrie B. Chase of Brattleboro or Judge Stanley R. Wilson of Chelsea.

When Lovell was taken to the Addison County Jail, where the prisoners are kept pending the completion of the new Rutland County Jail, he was placed in the large cell room with the other three prisoners who were given a certain amount of freedom. Longe sat in a corner alone and the other three suspects appear to have nothing to do with him.

It is a fight btween Longe and the other three. Madeline's first story implicated her father, her succeeding tales exorerated him. She kissed her father today when permitted to see him. She and her parent had been on cool terms since Bishop, her sweetheart, was jailed by Longe who accused the former of luring his daughter away.

The girl is reported by Bishop as saying that she saw the four men divide their spoils the night of the murder. This has been denied by the prisoners.

Boston Professors Call Santa 'Fraud'

Santa Claus, with his white beard, boots, furs and reindeer, has been condemned as a fraud and the epitome of selfishness. He has even been threatened with violence.

No less a person that Dr. H. Augustine Smith, professor at the Boston University School of Religious Instruction, has declared: "I'd like to deal Santa Claus a jolly kick that would land him out into the Winter where he might freeze his ears."

This sentiment was subscribed to by Dr. James A. Beebe, dean of Boston University Theological School, who referred to the customary Christmas celebrations as "rowdyism."

There are ultra-religious folk who express the opinion that, instead of filling children's minds with the "stuff and nonsense" of Santa Claus, parents should sit down and soberly question their offspring on original sin or some similarly elevating topic.

The learned professors believe that Christmas time could be best employed by instilling a horror of war in children's hearts.

"The real spirit of Christmas," said Professor Smith, "is, first of all, idealism. The wise men followed a star. Then it is sanctity of childhood and of motherhood—the magic worshipped a mother and her baby. After that it is self-sacrifice, and giving—but what do we find today?

WANTS "REAL CHRISTMAS."

"We find fathers and mothers introducing a noisy, wearisome old saint—Santa—then drawing down the curtains, shutting out the cold night, burning the candles, putting on the ermine, and shouting, 'Merry Christmas!' while all around the world is agony and pain!

"It is time that we had a real Christmas. 'Peace on earth, good will to men,' the Scripture reads, yet in all the old countries of Europe they suffer in anguish, women and little children. Where is the world brotherhood of that—at Christmas time? Why don't we this Christmas, ask our children, 'What's the use of fighting?' and put into their childish hearts, very early, a horror of war? What better time to do this than when families get together to celebrate Christmas?

"Santa Claus and the old-time Christmas, both seem so selfish to me. Why, we start our babes almost at the very cradle to think only of themselves, and then we wonder why they are self-centred.

"We tell them: 'Now, there's a nice, noisy old man, who wears ermine and laughs very loud, who lives up at the North Pole, and has reindeer and lots of gifts in his sleigh for you, my little Johnny.'

"Johnny's attention is never drawn to Freddie, who may eat dry bread on Christmas; Santa, the noisy old fogy, exists only for young John. The grown-ups are to blame; they propagate the fallacy. I have even seen sensible business men, whose judgment is to be depended upon in other matters, ask, in department stores: 'Can't you sell me some comic idea or other for Christmas? Show me some notion with pep.'

"Where's the reverence of that? Let us forget this semi-savage spirit of the great holiday, and let us, instead, bring back the old Christmas carols; let us try pageantry, teaching our children to act through the drama of the wise men and the star and the blessed Baby, sleeping in the manger; like those wise men of old, we should follow a star—for that is Christmas idealism.

"At this period of the suffering of the world, let us begin at blessed Christmas time to practice a new era of Christian fellowship, even as the angels sang at the first Christmas of all—'peace on earth, good will to men.'"

DR. BEEBE AGREES.

To all of which Dr. Beebe agreed. "Christmas can be a happy occasion, if divorced from some of its current rowdyism," said he. "We Americans have a tendency to over-emphasize the material side of all our red letter days. Christmas should deepen our devotion, and quicken our religion. Let the family get together, and let us save the best in the old Christmas, while we replace the old abuses with a higher spirit of reverence in the new."

Saint Nicholas, as perhaps is not generally known, was the favorite saint of Greeks and Romans thousands of years ago. He was the patron and guardian of children, and scholars were also supposed to be under his protection.

What are Your Ideas on Santa Claus?

Are YOU in favor of exiling Santa Claus?

Do YOU believe that he should be "kicked out in the cold?"

Do YOU think that children should be taught to think of the serious things of life at Christmas, instead of keeping up the tradition of jolly old Kris Kringle?

Whatever your belief, the American would be glad to hear from you on the matter.

Write to the Santa Claus Editor, Boston American, giving your views.

3 NATIONS PLAN WAR ON RUSSIA

Kerensky to Lead Concerted Spring Drive of Poland, Hungary and Rumania

Paris, Dec. 2.—A gigantic simultaneous offensive by Poland, Hungary and Rumania, commanded by Kerensky, will be started against Soviet Russia about the middle of March, according to a decision taken at a meeting behind locked doors in the Russian embassy at Paris.

Present at the meeting besides Kerensky were representatives from three states, forty former members of the Russian Duma, numerous Czarist nobles, including the Count Ivanovski, formerly assistant chief of the secret service in Petrograd; General Vasile Baratov, who commanded an army corps under Grand Duke Nicholas; General Linteren, formerly holding a commission in the Czar's bodyguard, and Count Ysov Tschekina, a close friend of the late Czarina.

KERENSKY PRESENTS DETAILS.

Maurice Struve, General Wrangel's "ambassador," attended. His presence is most significant since he visited Quai D'Orsay Monday, declaring General Wrangel's 70,000 troops are now in Dalmatia to "be of any service to the French government."

Kerensky, who has returned from a tour of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary and Rumania, presented full plans for the forthcoming offensive, whereby Poland will effect a junction with the Hungarian army which will cross Galicia, if Czecho-Slovakia agrees, otherwise through Bessarabia. While these manoeuvers are progressing the Rumanian division reinforced by General Wrangel's army of adventurers will march toward Moscow by the way of the Ukraine.

PLAN TO SPLIT RUSSIANS.

According to the plans, Kief will be captured at the end of March, after which the three armies will combine for a wedge-like march toward Moscow, which is 480 miles from Kief. One wing will concentrate on Smolensk and another on Kharkov, the plan being to split the Soviet armies into three parts.

Kerensky's plans give the size of the army at 690,000 men, of which there will be 260,000 Polish, 150,000 Hungarians and 280,000 Rumanians and Wrangelists.

According to information reaching the Universal Service, the funds, equipment and munitions will be furnished by "an unnamed power distinguished for its continued hostility toward the Soviets."

PLEASANT VALLEY LINE TO HAVERHILL CLOSED

Lawrence, Dec. 2.—The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company has announced the discontinuance of the old line to Haverhill from this city, known as the Pleasant Valley line. Beginning December 9 the company will run but one line to the down river city, that on the south side of the river. The road through Pleasant Valley is in poor condition and the company will not spend money to repair it. The falling off in traffic on this route, augmented by the slackness of the mills, is given as another cause for discontinuing it.

MAINE WOODSMEN GIVEN SUBSTANTIAL WAGE CUT

Bangor, Dec. 2.—A new scale of wages for woodsmen in northern and eastern Maine has gone into effect, by agreement of employers. The pay now offered for woodsmen is $2.50 a day and board, and for pulp wood cutters on piece work $3.50 a cord. The old scale was $3 to $3.50 a day and $4 a cord. In Aroostook County the wages of woodsmen were cut last week from $90 a month to $52. Many pulp wood cutters are being laid off, 100 having been discarged by the Lincoln Pulp Wood Company. The labor supply here is plentiful.

WOOD TO LEAD ARMENIA ARMY

League Picks U. S. General for "Volunteer" Force to Assist in Arbitration

Geneva, Dec. 2. — The Armenian commission of the League of Nations assembly reported that it has reached a decision regarding the Armenian situation.

The commission announced that it had decided to send an "army of volunteers, headed by General Leonard Wood, U. S. A.," to assist in the arbitration by the United States between the Armenian republic and Mustapha Kemal.

President Wilson, by agreeing to act as mediator in the Armenian question, has regained at one stroke his popularity in Europe which he lost since the refusal of the United States Senate to ratify the peace treaty.

MAY ENMESH HARDING.

Diplomats in Geneva viewing the success of their efforts to entangle the United States in the Franco-British squabble for ownership of the Near East, are gleefully pointing out that now that President Wilson is again "declared in" on the European game it will be a difficult task for his successor, President Harding, to withdraw.

The President's decision, in their view, not only means that the United State will share the heavy responsibility for Near Eastern peace, but will also bear the largest burden of the expense, which will undoubtedly be immense.

The anomalous nature of President Wilson's mind, however, is being much commented on, since, although he refuses dealings with Soviet Russia he does not hesitate to negotiate with Soviet Armenia, which is practically ruled by Lenine, who has already shown his mastership by immediately succeeding in stopping the war with the Kemalists, a task which the whole league could not accomplish.

PLAYING FRANCE'S GAME.

Following Lenine's curt note of November 26 to Mustapha Kemal, which declared: "Armenia is a Soviet republic. Quit fighting her." Kemal and Armenia signed an armistice on November 29, whereby Armenia renounces the Sevres treaty in favor of Turkey.

When President Wilson's delegate reaches Kemal's headquarters, therefore, he will be met with the flat demand that the United States insist upon a revision of the Sevres treaty giving back to Turkey all of its former empire, which will involve taking from Greece all Greece has won.

If America agrees to this she will be playing the game of France and Italy against England thus inevitably enmeshing the next administration in the net of European conflicting interests, hatreds and intrigues.

The opinion of observers here is that President Wilson's action may force President Harding to assume charge of dislodging the Greek army from Smyrna and Thrace with American funds and American troops.

SPENDER SAYS IRISH FREEDOM IS IMPOSSIBLE

Irish independence is impossible, according to the claim of Harold Spender, English writer and author of the official life of Lloyd George, in an address at the Women's City Club.

Ireland's proximity, Mr. Spender asserts, makes it impossible for England to grant independence. He pointed out that in the event of Ireland receiving its freedom it could at least cut off England from food supplies. He added that the only hope of settling the Irish question rests in a coalition of parties.

OVER 2 MILLION OWED CITY

Unpaid Taxes of Gas Company, "L" and B. & M. Amount to $1,287,334.33

Three big public service corporations of Boston are owing the city $1,287,334.33 in taxes for 1920, with interest mounting up daily at the rate of 6 per cent.

Included in the number is the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, which is seeking a substantial increase in its rates through the Department of Public Utilities, although the company has been granted two increases of 50 per cent. within a year. The company owes $435,013.73 upon a valuation of more than $18,000,000 in real and personal property.

B. & M. OWES MOST.

The Boston & Maine Railroad owes the largest sum, with $483,033.89 unpaid upon a $20,000,000 valuation, while the Boston Elevated is no mean third with $369,286.71. The fact that receipts are failing to keep abreast of expenses is said to be the reason for the temporary default of taxes by these roads. If not paid by January the interest will be increased to 8 per cent.

Between 8,000 and 9,000 pieces of property and real estate upon which $1,100,000 in 1919 taxes is due are to be sold soon for non-payment of taxes, Collector Frank S. Deland has announced. The larger portion of this property is in Ward 5, with $279,000 in unpaid taxes, Ward 7 with $116,000 unpaid, Ward 8 with $148,000 and Ward 25 with $92,000.

TO ADVERTISE SALE.

The advertising of this sale will begin in the City Record of December 11, and the property will be sold after three such advertisements. The Journal building, at Nos. 4-6 Water street, taxed for $18,526, is among the Ward 5 properties. The Hanover Trust Company, closed by Bank Examiner Allen, is listed as owner.

AMERICAN ORDERS 3,000 XMAS BASKETS FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

ENTERTAINMENTS TO SWELL TOTAL OF DINNER FUND

Bates & Yerxa Company of this city. This firm had the contract last year and handled it in an unusually satisfactory manner. Persons who have purchased goods from this firm know the high quality of the merchandise it sells. Its reputation will be behind very basket of food that is distributed by the American.

An oportunity to bid on contract was given to eighteen leading firms of Greater Boston and the Cobb, Bates & Yerxa Company submitted the lowest bid. Therefore, it was given the contract.

James D. Casey, vice-president of the concern, in writing to the Basket Fund Editor concerning the order, said:

"In acknowledging your order for the Boston American Christmas Fund parcel of groceries, we wish to say that each order will be of the same quality namely, the very best the market affords, such as you bought of us last year for the same purpose. The chickens are milk fed chickens of the best quality. The cranberries we are furnishing are the very best Cape Cod cranberries. The potatoes are the best quality Aroostook potatoes. The canned corn is fancy Maine corn, the best we handle. The mince meat is of the highest quality. The same is true of the vegetable soup which is a well-known brand.

3,000 ORDERS PLACED.

"Money cannot buy better articles than the ones you have specified, as you did last year, and that is one reason we are so desirous of handling this business for you.

"We hope our delivery this year will please you as it did last year, and, also, please in every way the good people to whom you are sending this very liberal parcel of Christmas food."

An initial order of 3,000 parcels of food has been placed and the Boston American has the privilege of increasing the order at any time. Additional orders will be placed as the total of the fund warrants.

The cartons of "chocolate spread" represents a personal donation from John Walker, Sr., manager of the Massachusetts Chocolate Company, who gave $9,200 bars of chocolate candy to the Boston American for distribution last year. This contribution by Mr. Walker is equivalent to several hundred dollars. This product may be used as a spread in place of butter, and also for all culinary uses in which chocolate or cocoa are used with the single exception of drinking. It is not perishable.

Mr. Walker is regarded as one of the most philanthropic residents of Roxbury. His friends tell of innumerable good deeds that he has done. He has personal knowledge of the good work done by the Basket Fund and says he is very glad to help the fund for that reason. In discussing his gift, he said:

"Business in all lines, as you know, is going to have a very bad year; most business will register losses instead of profits. It seems to me this is a year when gifts of this kind should be made personally, and that all who have sufficient should be willing to divide a little. Our country and our people have been very prosperous for a few years, so much so that the reaction which we are now experiencing is bound to be severe. The high cost of living is still with us, and the main articles of food are higher now than before the war, therefore there should be no serious reduction in wages.

URGES PUBLIC TO HELP.

"The business interests of the country are taxed and taxed until they are almost at the end of their resources. They need every dollar that they have to keep the wheels moving so as to keep the maximum number of people at work. The number of unemployed is increasing daily.

"Hardship coming so closely on the heels of extreme prosperity is very hard to bear and is bound to increase the unrest which is now prevalent throughout the large manufacturing centres, so I believe that industry should be dealt with leniently by both the government in shape of taxation and public opinion, because I believe they are trying their unmost to solve the great problems ahead of us, but people, real people who have sufficient for themselves, should dig deep and contribute according to their means."

Professor H. A. Thompson of Cambridge, whose pupils will appear in an entertainment and dance in his academy at Inman square, Cambridge, next Wednesday night in aid of the Basket Fund, reports that tickets for the occasion are selling rapidly. One of those who is to appear in the entertainment is Frances Clunes, a clever little dancer.

Many persons from Revere are planning to attend the charity ball and entertainment at the Copley-Plaza Hotel ballroom, Tuesday evening, December 21, under the auspices of the Amelia Burnham School for Dancing, in aid of the fund, as Miss Edna Sturtz, who is known as "the Ann Pennington of Revere," is to be one of the entertainers.

Among the pathetic appeals received for Christmas dinners is the following from a Charlestown girl:

"Will you please send us a basket this year? You sent us a basket last year and we were more than thankful. If you don't send us something this year we won't have anything for Christmas. So please don't forget us as we are awfully poor. There are seven of us in the family and we only got two beds to sleep in and not a cover over us; only old coats. If you don't think I am telling the truth send someone to see. We are awfully cold, so you can see we need a basket."

CHILDREN NEED CLOTHES.

A woman from Roxbury wrote:

"As I am in very poor circumstances this Winter, I am going to ask you if you can help me a little. The few dollars I had saved for coal went to the expressman for moving. I have six children whose ages are from one to fourteen years. My little boy I had to take from high school to help. I have four under six years of age. If I could get some warm clothing for the little ones, as they are very pale from being indoors, I would be very grateful and pray for anyone that helps me that they may never know poverty or want. Your paper has been so kind and thoughtful to the poor. You will have my prayers. Anything you can send me will be appreciated. My baby, three years old, is going to be operated on for adenoids next week. My boy earns $12 a week, which is my income. Hoping some day to help you, with the help of God, I remain—"

FORD'S 'POISON PEN' FLAYED

U. S. Atty. Goldberg Denounces Anti-Jewish Propaganda as Un-American

Henry Ford and his anti-Jewish propaganda were scathingly arraigned by Assistant United States District Attorney Lewis J. Goldberg in an address on "Anti-Semitic Propaganda in This Country," before the Symposium group of the Junior Council of the Crawford street synagogue, Roxbury.

Mr. Goldberg declared that "Anti-Semitic propaganda is being conducted on an extensive scale in the United States. It would have been laughed to scorn during the war when idealism was at its height.

FLAYS POISON PEN.

"Yet today, two short years after the war, Henry Ford, an alleged idealist, is found conducting a movement to spread the poison of race hatred through his newspaper, the Dearborn Independent, through the most prejudiced attacks ever printed in the English language," he said.

"No one seems to be able to determine the cause of his sudden mania," Mr. Goldberg continued. "I can guess that some Jew sometime, somewhere, somehow, offended his Royal Majesty, whereupon Emperor Henry decided that all Jews must perish from the earth.

"The country, however, knows that what he says or thinks on anything other than mechanics is not worth the paper it is written upon."

HIS FAITH IN OUTCOME.

Mr. Goldberg read excerpts from the "protocols" alleged by propaganda to have been written by the "wise men of Zion." While only ordinary common sense was needed to realize their utter falsity, Mr. Goldberg denounced their nation-wide distribution as a dastardly attempt on the part of a group of unknowns, at an enormous expense, to poison the minds of every intellectual American non-Jew—a move worthy of the darkest days of Russia.

"We hope that America will read the answer of the Jewish committee to this propaganda," concluded the Federal attorney. "We must pursue the policy of publicity to expose this conspiracy that aims to undermine true Americanism. I have no fear of the outcome. We have faith in America."

NORTH ADAMS MAYOR TO SEEK MORE COAL

North Adams, Dec. 2.—Following a conference with local coal dealers which brought out the fact that there is very little coal in the city at present and that no immediate shipments are expected, Mayor Ezra D. Whitaker, acting as local fuel administrator, is preparing to go to Boston to confer with the State fuel administrator to see what can be done toward shipping more coal to North Adams.

JAPS BUY NEW WAR WEAPON

Purchase From Germany a "Shellless Cartridge" That Will Add to Army Efficiency

By KARL F. WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Dec. 2.—The Japanese who have had a special detail of army officers in Berlin studying the German "war machine" that was, especially the German war office and its methods of industrial organization and mobilization for war purposes, have purchased the patents to a new German war invention—the "shellless cartridge."

It is named the "Lehmann cartridge" after the inventor. It consists of a rifle and machine gun bullet which has the powder charge directly in the bullet and requires no shell around it. The claim is made for it that rifles and machine guns can be made lighter and the rapidity of the fire greatly increased.

According to members of the former German general staff, the Japanese have been on the scout for the latest German inventions ever since the first Japanese came into Germany after the armistice. For a time they were so numerous and so silent about their purpose and work that it caused comment among officers of some of the other allied missions here.

Owing to the widespread publicity given to reports of the kindly manner in which the Japanese treated the German war prisoners in Japan, there is a distinct sympathetic feeling in Germany toward Japan, more especially in military circles.

Outdoor "Boudoir" Puzzles Police

Who is using the wooded section in Mill street, Dorchester as a boudoir?

This is a problem which the Dorchester police are trying to solve, after receiving a hurried tip from Benjamin Hunt who espied garments behind a stalwart oak.

He stopped long enough to determine they were men's garments, and included outer as well as inner clothing. He notified the police and Special Officer Gale was ordered to unravel the mystery.

Policeman Gale reported the clothes somewhat moth eaten and a bit mouldy. "Guess someone was changing his clothes for a later fashion," he reported.

THE SUGGESTION "WAS PUT TO" THE MAYOR WHO APPROVED.
BUSINESS MEN DON'T WANT TO MIX BUSINESS WITH PHILANTHROPY. THEY WANT MORE RETURN FOR THEIR MONEY.
MISS ELISABETH M. HERLIHY SECRETARY OF THE CITY PLANNING BOARD
H. Harmony

IDEAL HOUSING CORPORATION, AS SEEN BY MISS HERLIHY—

Composed of women.

Directed by a board of business, professional and home-keeping women.

Would issue bonds at moderate interest.

Would build attractive dwellings, conforming to every health regulation and preferably having gardens.

Who keeps the home?

Who best understands the needs of the home?

Who suffers most inconvenience when drains are wrong, plumbing poor, lighting bad and house congested?

The woman of the family; the one who does the work, rears the children and makes the dwelling place a home for her husband.

Then she should have a say in the building, arrangement and maintenance of that home.

This is the idea of Miss Elisabeth M. Herlihy, secretary of the City Planning Board, with headquarters at No. 47 City Hall; and she would have it carried out by means of a women's housing corporation. In fact, preliminary steps have been taken to interest the women of Boston in such a plan, by the formation of a committee of women who have already held several conferences on the subject with Miss Mary A. Barr, the only woman member of the City Planning Board.

A JOB FOR WOMEN.

Six years with the board have taught Miss Herlihy, who has been its secretary ever since it was formed, how to get things done. The housing proposition, which has been so acute for the past year or more, was put up to Boston business men. They were shy; money put into real estate would yield only moderate returns.

"And so," said Miss Herlihy, "the idea came to me one night, 'Why can't the women put this over? They are the ones to whom home means the most. To a man it is chiefly a place to eat and sleep; to the woman, it is her life.'"

The suggestion was "put up to" the Mayor. He approved, and so did Miss Barr. Result, a group of women was called together to thresh the subject out. It is still under discussion, and Miss Herlihy is hopeful of good results.

"Women are the ones to appeal to in a matter of civic responsibility like this," she said. "When the Liberty loans were floated, what per cent. did they pay? Only 3½ for the first; the others a little higher—all low rates of interest, as rates went at that time. And yet people bought.

"The idea of a housing movement can be compared to it. People simply must have homes; they can't supply them for themselves; some one must do it. Business men don't want to mix business with philanthropy; they want more return for their money. But women can see the necessity of meeting this need. And they can put it over.

2,000 VACANT "HOMES."

"There is already a splendid committee formed, which includes a woman lawyer, a business woman, a woman accountant, a woman architect, and so on. We are in touch with a particularly attractive parcel of land. It would be suitable for the erection of thirty or forty houses. I should like to see those houses of an especially attractive type, all conforming to every building and health regulation.

"We have got away to a great extent from the slumming method of living. One fact shows this significantly. You may recall that when an investigation was made of housing conditions here in Boston recently the assessors reported to the Mayor's Committee on Rent and Housing that there were about 2,000 vacant houses. But every one of them was unfit to live in. People were practically homeless, and calling for shelter, but they simply would not live in these places. In other words, standards of living have risen.

"There used to be an alley in the North End where you could stand in the middle, stretch out your arms and touch the houses on both sides. People had their front doors and windows on this street; it was all they had; hardly any air, little light, no sunlight.

"Well, after a while the city took over a section of the block, tore it down and made a playground of it. I wish you could realize the difference.

"People have an idea that city planning is something academic, something 'highbrow.' It is really something economic. Boston has been rather slow to convince of the need for such a department; the West took kindly to it a long time ago.

GAINED CONFIDENCE.

"We have now been at work for six years; we had to find ourselves, and are just beginning to do so. Now the board has gained the confidence of every quasi-public organization in the city, and they have all co-operated wonderfully with us."

The City Planning Board was appointed under a legislative act toward the end of the Fitzgerald administration, with Ralph [illegible] Cram as chairman, a position which he still fills. The other members, all unpaid, are: John J. Walsh, Frederic H. Fay, Henry Abrahams and Miss Barr, the only woman member. The legislative act under which the board was formed provides that one member of it shall be a woman.

One of the projects now before the City Planning Board is the widening of Cambridge street in the West End. In making its survey in such a case, the board studies every aspect of the situation—population, traffic, degree of congestion, history of the community, and so on.

"By a study of its history for the past fifty years, say, we can get an idea of what its development is likely to be in the next fifty years," Miss Herlihy explained. "We made an exhaustive study of conditions in the housing situation. For one thing, we queried all the industrial plants by means of personal representatives of the board and by questionnaires.

WOMAN ADMITS SLAYING HAMON

Affinity of Oklahoma G. O. P. Committeeman Fleeing to Mexico to Hide

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 2.—Towards Mexico leads the trail of Mrs. Clara Smith Hamon, secretary to and so-called affinity of the late Jake L. Hamon, Republican committeeman of Oklahoma, who died five days ago in Ardmore, Okla., of a bullet wound the woman is charged with inflicting.

The girl, who escaped from Ardmore and is said to have been directed by powerful and political interests, lost in the course of flight something of the courage she displayed the day she motored out of Ardmore with two automatic pistols and $10,000.

The shining symbol of the law pinned to the suspender of a small town Texas constable broke her nerve and brought from her, according to one witnesses, a confession of the shooting.

The alleged confession is reported through E. W. Sallis of Dallas. His story links into other details, already investigated. Mrs. Hamon visited the dying man in the hospital the day after the shooting. She then left Ardmore in a motor car and drove to Durant. From Durant she was driven to Denison, Tex., and then to Dallas.

From Dallas to Cisco, Tex., she was driven by Mr. Sallis, who, at Cisco, purchased her a railroad ticket for El Paso, Tex. In parting from Sallis the woman confided that she proposed to go into hiding in Juarez, Mexico.

Ardmore, Okla., Dec. 2.—County Attorney Brown said today that he may issue warrants very soon charging accessory after the fact for rich and influential Oklahoma men who are said to have assisted in the escape of Clara Smith Hamon, accused of shooting Jake L. Hamon, Republican National Committeeman.

TIRED OF DISHWASHING BOY STARTS TO RUN AWAY

Worcester, Dec. 2.—Disgusted with dishwashing, which he considered unmanly, ten-year-old Douglas Dutcher left his home in Framingham and started to walk to that of his grandmother in Athol. He fell asleep in the Union Station here, was discovered by a policeman, fed by a representative of the Travelers' Aid Society and taken back to Framingham by his parents. The boy told a policeman that his stepmother made him wash dishes.

Lady Still a Lady in Hub, Despite Suffrage

Has suffrage done away with "ladies," "spinsters," members of the "fair sex" and the "weaker sex"?

Are these ancient terms to go, now that women have won so many rights and consider themselves as good as any man or better?

Councillor Margaret Hodge of London told the Women's Freedom League there such outworn phrases ought to be put under the ban by the "emancipated" sex. She declared they recalled the mid-Victorian era, when women were ornaments, and she took special and violent objection to the term "mother-in-law."

Councillor Hodge said all these moss-covered expressions indicated a patronizing attitude on the part of the haughty, short-haired sex, and demanded that something be done about it.

VIEWS OF BOSTON WOMEN.

So Boston women who have led in the fight for women's rights were asked their views, and what they would suggest as substitutes for these relics of a day when mere man made the dictionaries.

Some thought that the militant Councillor Hodge was right. Some thought the matter inconsequential. Some frankly stated they liked being called "fair sex," whether they were or no.

But none could suggest substitutes, and as the "Ladies, God bless 'em," must be called something, the matter is still very much up in the air.

"I quite agree that the term spinster is inappropriate," said Mrs. Ida Porter Boyer, lecturer for the Boston League of Women Voters. "Men are the spinsters today." Mrs. Boyer thought the word, as applied to women, conjured up pictures of patient old maids waiting for men who never came.

"As for the term 'lady,'" she continued, "that, in its derivation, means loaf giver. It grew out of the time when women sowed the grain and baked the bread. It no longer fits.

"WEAKER SEX" MISNOMER.

"The term 'weaker sex' was always a misnomer. A misnomer, that is, unless mere muscular strength is meant. Even then, with the statistics of the draft before me, I have my doubts.

"Now 'fair sex,'" and the speaker paused. "I have seen," she went on, "men of Apollo-like appearance quite as often as women of Venus-like beauty. The term, though, is more foolish than inflammatory."

Mrs. Boyer did not object to the term "mother-in-law." She wanted to know what could take its place.

To all of which Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, chairman of the Women's State Republican Committee, took exception. An "advanced" and "strong minded" member of her sex, she confessed without shame to liking the term "fair sex." She said it conveyed a compliment, whether the women were fair or not. She did not anticipate any feminine rebellion against the sweet flattery.

MUST PROVE STRENGTH.

"As for our being the weaker sex, let us wait to prove that we are strong before we change it," said Mrs. Bird.

"Of course the term 'mother-in-law' has stood for ridicule in comic literature, but I think the name is one of honor. I am a mother-in-law myself. I am very fond of the relatives I acquired that way. The whole matter is not important."

Mrs. James D. Tillinghast, legislative chairman of the Republican State Committee, was frankly impatient with Councillor Hodge.

"Where are her substitutes?" she demanded. "Where, for instance, could she find a word to take the place of 'mother-in-law'? You remember what Shakespeare said about the rose by any other name smelling as sweet."

Which Miss Anna Weinstock, president of the Women's Trade Union League, amended by a spirited ridicule of Councillor Hodge and her little plan.

"Will the lady bring about by law a substitution of words for those she finds objectionable?" she asked.

"What's the matter with the word 'lady'? I am rather fond of it myself. 'Fair sex' may mean that we play fair, as well as that we are fair.

"They may call me by all the old-fashioned names they want, so long as the spirit is kind. I don't think we have time to revise the dictionary for such trifles."

From which it would appear that in Boston a lady will be a lady still, regardless of her right to vote, smoke and have a "career."

STANDARD OIL TO FIGHT FOR FRENCH BUSINESS

Paris, Dec. 2.—The Standard Oil will start her war with the Royal Dutch on January 1, when the law just signed abolishing the government petrol monopoly becomes effective. SEIZE 9 STILLS; ARREST 6 MEN

Large Quantities of Moonshine and Mash Found by Dry Agents in Raids

Activity on the part of prohibition agents and police officers resulted in the arrest of six persons on charges of violating the Volstead Act. Nine stills and large quantities of moonshine, mash and other intoxicants were seized.

Moonshine valued at about $3,000 was found in South Natick, on the premises occupied by Samuel Goldman, No. 27 Glenn street. Federal officers seized five copper stills and 143 gallons of moonshine. Goldman was arrested.

Patrick Doherty of No. 8 Concord avenue, Charlestown, was arrested when two large stills, one with a capacity of forty gallons, were found on the premises. Three quarts of moonshine and eighty gallons of mash were seized.

Edward Barret of No. 24 Mitchell street, South Boston, was arrested when a still was found in his home.

Calvin Phelps was taken into custody for selling a quart of whiskey to an agent in a barn at First and Hurley streets, East Cambridge.

Charged with operating a forty-gallon still, Christos A. Tarvas, No. 4 Dennis road, Peabody, was arrested. Four gallons of moonshine and 100 gallons of mash were seized at this address.

Agents arrested Morris Baumstein in the soft drink saloon at No. 16 North Russell street, West End, on a charge of selling whiskey.

Cambridge police claim they detected Joseph Toomey, a bartender, at No. 461 Cambridge street, East Cambridge, selling a drink. They confiscated the stock and fixtures of the establishment and said they would ask for warrants for the proprietors, Daniel J. Barry, Cliff street, Roxbury, and Russell A. Golden of Hollis street, Somerville.

TWELVE CANARIES ARE TAKEN BY MEAN THIEF

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 2.—Evidently there is a thief at work here who wouldn't bat an eyelash at stealing the proverbial pennies off a dead man's eyes. At least this is the belief of Mrs. M. Toussaint, who reported to the police that twelve canaries she used for breeding purposes had been stolen. The birds represented her sole means of livelihood, she said.

RICE

This is the Best and Cheapest Food

THERE is no more delicious food than rice. Cook it so that each grain swells to tender plumpness — so that every flake stands alone. Then eat it as you do potatoes with gravy poured over it, or golden butter melting through it.

Serve rice as a vegetable with all kinds of meat, fish and poultry. Bake it with chopped meats—it's a meal by itself. With sugar and cream, it can't be equaled as a breakfast cereal.

Eat rice every day—you'll enjoy it. And you will save money, too. For rice is the most economical food. A cupful makes enough for a family of five. None is ever wasted. Leftover rice can be made into a large variety of tasty dishes. There are over three hundred delightful ways to prepare it.

Rice is a healthful food. It digests in one hour. Other foods take from one hour and forty-five minutes to four hours. It builds strength and sustains energy. Rice is the finest food grown—American rice leads the world in quality, flavor, and wholesomeness.

You Will Like this Master Recipe

From the southland, where rice is a famous dish, comes this splendid recipe. It is so easy to cook rice this way, that anyone can successfully do so the first time they try by following the directions.

Wash rice thoroughly in a strainer. Use a deep porcelain or agate-ware kettle. To four cups of boiling water add one level teaspoonful of salt. Then add one cup of washed rice so slowly that water continues to boil. Lift rice occasionally with fork, and shake kettle so that no kernels stick to bottom. But—this is important—never stir the rice. Boil twenty minutes. Then pour water off, if any, and place in open oven where it will finish swelling without burning. Each grain will stand alone, plump, tender and delicious.

Consult any standard cook book for a number of excellent recipes for rice. Here are a few others.

RICE WITH TOMATOES
Wash a cup of rice, dry on stove, fry in one tablespoonful of hot lard and when light brown stir in one finely-chopped onion, fry 10 minutes, next add a tablespoonful tomato paste, chopped garlic, parsley, pepper and salt; cover with hot water, cook slowly, never stirring. Sausage cut in small pieces or chicken giblets may be added.

JAMBALAYA
Cut a piece of fresh beef, veal, lamb, or pork (a pound) into pieces an inch square and chop two or three onions fine. Put a large tablespoonful of sweet lard into a deep sauce pan. When hot add the chopped pork with the onions and let them brown, stirring for five minutes, then add about the same amount of chopped ham as you have of pork, and a quarter pound of chopped Vienna sausage. Next add the herbs, a bay leaf, a little parsley, two cloves with a saltspoon of salt and brown a few minutes longer. When all are nicely browned add two quarts of hot soup-stock or hot water. Let it cook about ten minutes; when boiling add a cup of rice washed and dried. Let boil until the rice is tender, stirring frequently to keep from burning. Season with salt, cayenne, and tobasco or chile sauce. Serve very hot in bowls or on plates.

FRIED RICE CROQUETTE
One cup of boiled rice, one teaspoonful of melted butter, one egg beaten lightly, one teaspoonful of sugar and half as much salt, and enough milk to make it into a stiff paste. Flour hands and make the mixture into balls, dip into beaten egg and then into flour or cracker crumbs and fry in hot sweet lard. Drain on paper and serve.

TONE IMPROVES IN BOSTON

Local Market Shows Early Strength; Range Narrow Curb Prices Recede

Unlike New York the Boston market had a strong tone at the opening and maintained it during the first hour. Oil issues were up, coppers had a better tone and New Haven showed a small gain. Packing issues were quiet, but those traded in had a forward tendency. The price movement was narrow and the market not so broad as at the close of the day before. American Sugar common advanced more than three points. Swift & Co. soon lost a point gain. Edison and American Sugar preferred receded a point. Root and Van Dervoort declined 1½ to a new low for the year.

Among stocks to make fractional gains were Bigheart, American Telephone, Copper Range, East Butte, North Butte, Mexican Investment, National Leather, Eastern Manufacturing and New Haven. Small losses were sustained by United Shoe, Pacific Mills and Superior & Boston.

CURB SOON WEAKENED.

After opening irregular the Curb market weakened. It was fairly active at the outset, but was dull before the morning was over. Early leaders were Eureka, Texana and Verde Mines. Among strong stocks at the start were Arizona Tip Top, Boston & Montana, Imperial, Mutual, Ophir and Pilgrim. Weak ones were Crystal, Denbigh, First National and Ranier.

At the end of an hour Eureka was off 2 cents at 53 cents, Verde Mines, 2 cents at 24 cents; Boston and Montana, 1 cent at 43 cents; Denbigh, 2 cents at 13 cents; Pilgrim, 1 cent at 9 cents, and Rainer, 4 cents at 13 cents. Imperial and Arizona Tip Top had lost their gains.

BEARS ATTACK SO. PACIFIC

Railway Shares Are Heavy During Forenoon; Oils Display the Most Strength

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, prices being midway between the lowest and highest levels of an active forenoon. Oils remained the strongest class and rails the weakest. Southern Pacific was kept under pressure. It was down to 106⅝ during the morning. American Woolen common was a strong issue, being up more than two points at its best.

Leather, Punta Alegre, U. S. Rubber, Stromberg and Royal Dutch advanced from one to two. Corn Products and Reading were off a point or more. Losses averaged small. Transactions for the first hour totalled about 250,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. The foreign exchange market had a steady start.

PRICE MOVEMENT MIXED.

After opening irregular the market weakened and then rallied. At the end of thirty minutes oils and steels were above the initial level. Rails remained weak, with Southern Pacific leading them downward. This issue was very active. It dropped more than a point on the opening sale of 3,500 shares. Oils showed the most class strength under the leadership of Mexican Petroleum and Pan-American. Steels had a bad start, but made a quick recovery. Crucible and Replogle advanced the most in this group. Motors, sugars and coppers were quiet and moved within a narrow range. This was true of the list as a whole. Traders confined their attention to petroleum and a few industrial issues and to carriers.

STOCKS IN LESS DEMAND.

The urgent demand for stocks induced by a covering movement at the close yesterday did not exist this morning. The trading element was disposed to operate on the bear side and to attack rails. On Wednesday there was a drive against high-priced ones. This morning some low-priced carriers were put under pressure, but were quickly abandoned when it was found they did not succumb easily. Thereafter Southern Pacific was the main objective. It was forced down about three points during the first hour. Little was done with New Haven. After showing a small loss it showed a small gain. By mid-morning the list was irregular, but aside from rails, which were above their lowest, the market had a good tone.

LARGE DISBURSEMENTS DURING THIS MONTH

Dividend and interest payments to be made this month are estimated at a total of $326,979,279, as compared with $327,702,537 in December last year. This is the calculation by the Journal of Commerce. Dividends will amount to $67,179,729, against $68,828,279.

It is figured that interest payments will aggregate $259,800,000, of which the United States government will distribute $142,900,000. Most of the government payments will be on account of Liberty and Victory Bonds.

Europe Sends More Gold

It is reported in London that aside from American purchases in the open market a large amount of gold will be shipped to the United States before the end of this year. Half a million is coming on the Adriatic for Kuhn, Loeb & Company, bringing the importations of this house up to $70,427,000 for the year to date. This includes $3,684,000 shipped on the Finland.

Government Silver Purchase

The United States Treasury has just bought 140,000 ounces of silver for delivery at the San Francisco mint. This brings purchases under the Pittman $1 an ounce act up to 18,968,107 ounces.

November Capital Issues

It is estimated that new capital issues last month aggregated $176,700,206, compared with $338,793,309 in October and $253,552,900 in November, 1919.

U. S. SOLD SILVER AT BIG LOSS

Bolstering Up British Coinage Cost This Government $82,800,000

Washington, Dec. 2.—At the time the United States attempted to uphold the silver and coinage and currency of Great Britain and other countries in April, 1918, by selling them $350,000,000 in silver obtained by melting down silver dollars, silver was selling at $1.40 per ounce in the open market, according to official information obtained at the office of the director of the mint.

As this country sold the silver at forty cents an ounce less than it could have obtained for it in the open market, the loss on the face value of the bullion was therefore $12,000,000, as Great Britain purchased 207,000,000 ounces to bolster up her silver currency in India, where a revolt was threatened. It cost us $82,800,000 to help her out.

The loss is much more than that, as the United States is required by the Pittman act under which the silver was sold to purchase a similar amount of silver from American producers at $1 per ounce. This despite the fact that silver has since been quoted as low as 65 cents per ounce and is now quoted at 85½ cents per ounce.

The quotation of $1.40 was obtained from the office of the director of the mint after an official of the State Department had defended the transaction on the ground that it had aided Great Britain without loss to the United States.

"We sold the silver at $1 and bought it back at that price. So where was the loss," asked this official. "Besides England needed the help and as her ally we could not have refused it. It was not an ordinary business transaction," he added.

When his attention was called to the fact that the sale was made at forty cents per ounce less than the market price he said he still could not see where the loss came.

The official quoted is an earnest advocate of the League of Nations.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Dec. 2.—Cables from Liverpool were better than had been due at the opening of the cotton market here and had an influence in advancing prices 22 to 35 points. Liverpool houses bought and there was further covering by Wall street and local shorts. The demand was supplied by traders who have been bullish in the last day or two and who have good profits. After the start prices sagged about 15 points from the top and at the end of fifteen minutes the list was about 18 points net higher. Opening prices were: December, 16.40; January, 16.45; March, 16.50; May, 16.45; July, 16.53; October, 16.45.

One Hundred Investment Bargains in Railroad Bonds

In a circular prepared by one of the greatest bond authorities in this country, which we have just had printed, the bond situation is not only thoroughly covered, but there is a list of one hundred bargains in high grade railroad bonds yielding as high as

Ten Per Cent

Among this list are many unusual investment opportunities, and inasmuch as underlying factors are now favorable to rising bond prices, a selection of these bonds would unquestionably result in excellent market profits, in addition to an attractive income return.

The circular will be sent without obligation, together with a booklet describing a convenient method of purchasing the bonds.

132 Foxes Shown in Boston

Joseph J. Hug of Penacook, N. H., exhibiting "bottle baby" fox at Horticultural Hall.

The second day of the second live fox show, given by the American Fox Breeders' Association, witnessed another big throng of spectators in Horticultural Hall. Fox men from all over the United States and Canada were in attendance, including James White and F. C. Nunnick of Toronto, members of the Commission of Conservation representing the Canadian government.

A total of 132 foxes was benched at the show, whose value may be estimated by the fact that pairs of silver black foxes sought for breeding purposes bring as high as $5,000. An interesting exhibit was that of Mrs. A. H. C. Mitchell of Sherborn, showed four foxes of cross breeding.

Joseph J. Hug of Penacook, N. H., showed a fox brought up by him on milk fed from a nursing bottle.

DEMAND TARIFF AGAINST JAPS

Senators Urge Protection for American Manufacturers in Several Lines

By International News Service.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Japan has become such a formidable competitor of American industries that the question of barring Japanese goods with a tariff promises to perplex Congress as much as that of shutting out Japanese immigrants with an immigration wall, several prominent members of the Senate Finance Committee stated today.

There are several "hold-over" measures on the calendar intended to protect industries from the extensive importation of surgical instruments, optical glasses, laboratory glassware and porcelain ware, shell and pearl buttons and other articles in which the Japanese became proficient during the world war.

Japan can undersell the American manufacturers here in some instances by 25 per cent., it was stated.

It is the purpose of Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana, chairman of a subcommittee of the finance committee, which has these bills in charge, to call them up at the coming short session. They were all passed by the House last session.

Senator Watson will go to Philadelphia this week, he said, for the purpose of discussing industrial and business conditions with Senator Penrose, Republican, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Senate finance committee. Penrose's continued ill health is expected to prevent his coming to Washington for the coming session, although a number of his Republican colleagues will keep in close touch with him by phone or personal visit.

The impression is general among members of Congress that nothing can or will be done at the coming session in the way of any tariff or tax legislation.

High Record Oil Exports

Exports of oil in October were valued at $52,203,226, and constitute a high record. For the first ten month of this year such exports amounted to $439,603,042, against $277,875,335 in the corresponding period of 1919 and $234,300,392 in the 1918 period. This country's stocks of crude oil at the end of October amounted to 129,382,000 barrels, a gain of 594,000 compared with the previous month. This reflects the record production of domestic crude, amounting to 39,833,000 barrels in October.

Copper Market Still Dull

The copper market remains dull and quotations for the red metal are merely nominal. It is stated that a large producer has made a sale for delivery early in the first quarter to a Western consumer at 13¾ cents a pound, but most producers are quoting 14 cents. Some of the smaller ones are asking 13½ cents.

BENSON SCORES U. S. SHIPPERS

Admiral Says Preference Given British Vessels Is Unfair to American Interests

Washington, Dec. 2.—Most of the defects in the organization and management of the United States Shipping Board which resulted in charges of wholesale waste and graft before the Walsh Committee had been corrected prior to the actual meeting of that committee, according to Admiral Benson, chairman of the board. Steps to correct the remainder of the defects have been taken, he added.

The statement was made following the first meeting of the newly appointed and reorganized board.

"The board unanimously expressed the feeling that every effort should be made to assist the committee in its work," continued the Admiral. "Every effort will be made to obtain further evidence and to prosecute all guilty parties as soon as evidence is obtained, regardless of whether they are within the organization or outside."

SCORES U. S. SHIPPERS.

Admiral Benson deplored the alleged fact that American shippers are giving their trade to foreign vessels in preference to American bottoms.

He called attention to a recent article in the Gulf Export Magazine which he said exactly expressed his sentiments.

"'The American people are proud of their merchant marine, yet the greatest opposition that is experienced in American shipping is coming from American shippers,' it said. 'We have ships and the Shipping Board is trying to perfect profitable trade routes to every country. The public is paying [illegible] American shippers who [illegible] these ships.

"'American shippers manifestly are favoring foreign lines. They make no allowance for the conditions under which the American merchant marine fleet was built or the handicaps under which the organization was trained and perfected.

DEMANDS LOYALTY.

"'It is a well known fact that some of our largest exporters tell the operators of American ships that they cannot use our boats because the British insist that his cotton be transported over a British line and that a British company shall care for the insurance.

"'If there is any loyalty in the American people or their shipping interests [illegible] reverse this process and demand of the British and other foreigners that if they want our products they will buy them under our conditions and that we propose to ship them on American vessels and take care of the insurance ourselves.'"

The board, sworn in by Secretary John J. [illegible], consists of the following members:

Admiral W. S. Benson, chairman; John A. Donald of New York, Guy D. Goff of West Virginia, Chester H. Rowell, California; [illegible] Sutter, Missouri; Joseph N. Teal, Oregon, and Frederick I. Thompson, Alabama.

Edward N. [illegible] of Chicago was named general counsel for the Shipping Board.

LIQUOR FINES BREAK RECORD IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Dec. 2.—The large business done by rumrunners in Lawrence is said to have been the means of making new fortunes for Lawrence rum makers, but the city has no complaint to offer in the profits resulting from the Volstead Act. One day's fines [illegible] amounted to more than $1000 [illegible] the largest daily total in fines collected here in a district court in ten years, outrivaling the famous fining days of 1913. The money is turned over to the city [illegible] months. It is expected that the revenue for the three months ending in December will exceed $3,000.

MILL WORKER'S BODY FOUND ON RAILWAY

Refrigeration and Meat

In less than an hour after an animal is dispatched in a Swift & Company packing plant, it is hanging up as meat in a room brought by refrigerating machinery to a temperature just above freezing.

From that time until it is in your own ice box—within two to three weeks—it is kept at the same temperature; first in the coolers at our packing plants; next on our refrigerator cars, more than 6,000 of which are constantly moving to market with their perishable cargoes; then in our refrigerator rooms at our branch selling houses; then in your dealer's ice box, and last in your own.

Only for the few minutes while it is being put into the refrigerator cars at our packing plants, or taken out of them at our branch houses, or whisked to your retailer in our trucks, is it exposed to any change of temperature.

Without a skilled use of this system of cooling, made possible by modern science, you could not get fresh meat, prepared under most sanitary conditions, except at greater expense—unless you happened to live so near live stock raising centers that your needs could be supplied from live stock raised near-by.

If the foregoing raises any question in the mind of the reader, we will endeavor to answer it, upon request.

THIEF BANISHED FROM STATE

Had Pleaded Guilty to Stealing Baggage From Union Station in Springfield

Springfield, Dec. 2.—Victor Rogaski, of Essex street, has been banished from the State for two years. Rogaski pleaded guilty in police court to stealing baggage from the Union Station. He was fined $2.00, ordered to make restitution in the sum of $500 and told to leave the State for two years or serve six months in the House of Correction. Judge Heady imposed the sentence after Rogaski admitted having taken baggage to the amount of $1,500 before being caught.

FIRST EGYPTIAN COTTON CARGO IS SMALL ONE

The British steamship Glenetive has reached here from Alexandria, Egypt, with 1,500 bales of cotton, the first shipment of the staple to come direct to Boston this season. Imagine a Girl Named "Elftertania"

If you are puzzled over a name for the little girl, dear Mr. and Mrs. Weddayear, worry no longer. Call her "Elftertania."

You don't like "Elftertania"? Well, how about Pruscena, Rhuemma or Xima?

The suggestions come from the Rev. William Harman van Allen, rector of the Church of the Advent, who is very much interested in the subject of new names for new girls.

Dr. van Allen writes for the "Living Church," the "Constructive Review" and other periodicals under the pen of "Presbyter Ignotus." The list of girls' names he has recommended to American Episcopalians is as follows:

SMOOT TO FIGHT BLUE LAW MOVE

Reformers Who Plan Drastic Sunday Measure Are Ridiculed by Reed

By Universal Service.

[illegible]

Senator Capper said the farmers of his State are too busy fighting the low cost of farm products to give much time to laws for a Blue Sabbath.

The Reform Organizations have established elaborate headquarters here and are preparing to carry on an extensive lobbying campaign at the Capitol during the coming session. Many of the skilful lobbyists of the Anti-Saloon League have forsaken that organization to take up the cause of the reform Sabbath.

Churches Oppose Sunday Blue Law, Says Bishop

That the Blue Laws for Sunday will be tabooed by the members of the federal council of the Churches of Christ of America, which has just opened its sessions in Ford Hall, was prophesied by Bishop J. J. Cannon of the Methodist Church (South).

He denied that the Anti-Saloon League would endorse any observance of the Lord's Day which would throw it back into Puritan hands.

There are four hundred delegates, representing thirty denominations and 21,000,000 members present.

HUGHES CHOSEN TRUSTEE.

Charles E. Hughes of New York was elected to serve for two years on the Board of Trustees, taking the place of Henry [illegible] Potter. Other members elected were Bishop W. F. McDowell, the Rev. Rufus W. Miller, John R. Mott, E. [illegible], [illegible] M. Little, John R. Hawkins, [illegible] and J. Ross Stevenson.

Officers elected were: President (for four years), [illegible]; general secretary, the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland of Boston; recording secretary, the Rev. R. D. Lord; treasurer, Alfred R. Kimball.

ADVOCATES GOLDEN RULE.

The Rev. James I. Vance, chairman of the executive committee, in making his report called for a statesmanship that is the statesmanship of the golden rule and the church, the only institution that can furnish it.

"Should the church fail the world in this hour of need," [illegible] "I would not say that the world is doomed. I would say that the church has passed sentence upon itself," he said.

Governor-elect Channing H. Cox made the address of welcome for the Bay State, the Rev. Charles [illegible] of Lynn for the Massachusetts Federation of Churches and the Rev. [illegible] Guthrie, pastor of the [illegible] Congregational Church, Boston, spoke for Boston Federation of Churches.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Advertisement.

DRY GOODS MEN REORGANIZE

Speakers at City Club See Optimistic Future; Vorenberg Scores Business Hatred

Business optimism coupled with a broader [illegible] was the keynote of the important meeting held by the New England Dry Goods Association [illegible] at which the name of the organization was changed to the Massachusetts Retail Merchants' Association [illegible] of this body.

The [illegible] National [illegible] Association and the large gathering of the [illegible] business [illegible] out [illegible] with the [illegible] greater confidence on all sides.

A [illegible] was [illegible] to nominate [illegible] at a meeting [illegible] association [illegible]

President [illegible] of the old organization [illegible] session.

VORENBERG OPTIMISTIC.

Felix Vorenberg [illegible] Company, president of the Retail Trade [illegible] in an optimistic [illegible] the best [illegible] move [illegible] business [illegible] and [illegible] and make [illegible]

It is [illegible] Mr. Vorenberg [illegible] civilization [illegible] from [illegible] much weight [illegible] department [illegible] an [illegible] to eradicate the [illegible] lines, the [illegible] return of merchandise and [illegible] unreasonable [illegible]

"Retailers represented by well organized [illegible] they help [illegible] others by their [illegible] legislation and [illegible] business methods into city, State and National governments.

DEPLORES SPIRIT OF HATE.

"Keep [illegible] with national organization [illegible] work [illegible] exchange [illegible] toward [illegible] having done something [illegible]

Furthermore, the organization will give us an opportunity to exchange [illegible] economic problems that arise from day to day. For example:

"When retailers have disposed of their surplus [illegible] a shortage [illegible] bring a brisk demand for all manufactured goods [illegible] wish to say that [illegible] same [illegible] when [illegible] prices [illegible] predict that the [illegible] and perhaps [illegible] February or March, we will [illegible] change for an [illegible]

"Business by [illegible] will settle down to a [illegible] in order to live [illegible] we must settle [illegible] prevailing [illegible] away with [illegible] known as [illegible] attitude, therefore respect and consideration.

"Confidence and prejudice will never make good partners and since we need the one we can [illegible] use of the other for good and ever, I hope. If you must [illegible] hate yourself and [illegible] will find [illegible] it is to be hated. Remember that every man working for [illegible] has a heart that beats under his shirt and beats just like yours so that when we get him to work with his heart and head as well as with his hands he will excel any power.

FOR SQUARE BUSINESS.

"Let [illegible] the message of having [illegible] work for us whole [illegible] our business relations on [illegible] such that [illegible] as [illegible] the other [illegible] with whom we [illegible] that we have a soul and that our methods of doing business are on the square at all times.

"Let us do everything possible to instill upon the public mind that all our transactions are [illegible] totally on the level and that we are eager to do what is right and make them know that our working partners are enjoying their work because we are happy and content to work together with them.

"Make our trade organization and this one in particular [illegible] of men who mean well and do well and let their work be an inspiration to those who ought to be members but have not responded to the call as yet. Let it become a privilege rather than a duty to be a member of the Massachusetts Retail Merchants' Association, and, finally, let love of mankind and respect to our fellow man be our guiding post in life. Let us think of how a brother tries to live of where he was born or what position he may hold and last, but not least, let us have confidence in the American people confidence in our country and confidence in business."

Samuel W. Reyburn, vice-president of the national organization said: "Retailers come in closest contact with consumers. When criticisms of high profits are made, we receive most of the blame.

MUST BE FAIR TO ALL.

"If we retailers had been organized interested in [illegible] and discussing things among ourselves, the 'buck' would not have been passed to us. Most discussions of economic questions turn on the problems presented by labor and capital. The third element, which is really the most important, is too often ignored. I mean management.

"It is our duty as managers to adjust labor and capital and [illegible] to both sides. We [illegible] wages and dividends, [illegible] required to do this."

Lew Hahn, managing director of the national association, said that [illegible] the retailers [illegible] prices [illegible] not only [illegible] part of [illegible]. We have simply got to prove that we are [illegible] business men by getting in touch and sympathy with the public, the government, the manufacturers, the bankers and each other.

Eddie Casey Boosts Mid-Western Stars

Eddie Casey, Harvard's great halfback, who has been coaching in the Middle West this season, returned to Boston yesterday with greatest praise for the quality of football offered by the big [illegible] that section and [illegible] even [illegible] players of the Big Ten.

Eddie declared [illegible] All-American team can rightly be [illegible] if it does not contain [illegible] such wonderful players as Workman and Stinchcomb of Ohio State [illegible] of Notre Dame and [illegible] which remark, to the very letter, bore out the information [illegible] received from other reliable [illegible] authorities from that section who, like Eddie, are familiar with the accepted football standards of the East.

"Bo" Shares Honors With Sergeant York

Battling successfully [illegible] a football gridiron seems to [illegible] just as much of a hit with [illegible] as did battling [illegible] to the much-discussed "Bo" McMillin of Centre College [illegible] same distinction [illegible] Sergeant York, the Tennessee volunteer, who through his exploits in France was hailed as [illegible] "one man army."

The latter, who was a non-com throughout his war career, was made a colonel on the staff of [illegible] of Kentucky commissions [illegible] McMillin [illegible] of Kentucky [illegible] McMillin a colonel of his staff. [illegible] title so popular in that section [illegible] in keeping with the [illegible] of things to call all their athletic team leaders colonels instead of captains.

Heaphy-Gildea Battle Looks Promising

The individual battle between [illegible] Heaphy of Boston College and [illegible] Gildea of Holy Cross in Saturday's game at Braves Field is going to [illegible] eyes from the man who is carrying the ball.

Heaphy has been rated very highly by those selecting honor elevens this season, and will have his reputation to defend, while Gildea, who has not been accorded such liberal notice, but who is a very able centre, can be counted on to do his best to prove the honor pickers were wrong.

McLEAN CHALLENGES NORWEGIAN SKATER

New York, Dec. 2.—D. R. Scanlan, manager of Bobby McLean of Chicago, former champion skater, has issued a challenge to Oscar Mathiesen of Norway for a series of races for the title. Scanlan said he had sent a personal challenge [illegible] Mathiesen but had received [illegible] and added that unless Mathiesen now agrees to meet the American McLean will claim the title.

Start "H" Hockey

There will be a meeting of candidates for the Harvard varsity and freshman hockey teams Tuesday night in the Harvard Athletic Association's building.

Somerville Youths Stars of Gridiron

Harry Robertson, star end on the big Syracuse eleven. He is one of the country's greatest.

Alex Anderson, centre of Georgetown eleven. Though very light for a snapper-back he has been able to hold his own with the best of them.

Captain Jim Robertson, who has twice been honored with the leadership of the Dartmouth team. His work at halfback has had much to do with the Green's success.

The city of Somerville has been very much on the college football map this season, for players who were taught the game while students at Somerville High School have many times had their names in sport page [illegible]

The outstanding five in the number are Jim Robertson of Dartmouth, his brother, Harry Robertson of Syracuse, Alex Anderson of Georgetown, Herb Treat of Boston College and [illegible] Smith of Holy Cross.

The first three on this list have captained their respective teams, while the first to be named—Jim Robertson—has gained the singular distinction of winning re-election to the captaincy of the Dartmouth team.

All five were in Somerville High at the same time and while some were just breaking into high school football as second and third string substitutes they are warm friends and much interested in each other's success.

Singularly each of the five plays a different position, Jim Robertson being a halfback, Harry Robertson an end, Alex Anderson a centre, Herb Treat [illegible] and [illegible] Smith a quarterback.

All have come in for All America or All-Eastern consideration this season [illegible] the Robertson brothers and [illegible] have been named as among the leading candidates for honors.

After a rapid recovery he made an unexpected entry into the [illegible] town game last week and came out with the shoulder dislocated once more.

Practice Against Holy Cross Formations

Cav started [illegible] lining up the seconds with a few Holy Cross formations and outlining the defense to be used against them. [illegible] Scanlan has seen Holy Cross play a few of her games this season and the work of the Purple [illegible] In the [illegible] Corrigan [illegible] putting [illegible] into the work [illegible]

A [illegible] drill was on the card for today, as Cav is taking no chances on having his players get any of the plays mixed up, he wants the eleven to be well grounded in the various defensive formations which will be required.

The Knights of Columbus Club will stage a celebration in the form of a dance at Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics Building, Saturday night, with the members of the opposing teams as guests of honor. They are due for more than a little celebration after a training season which has extended over ten weeks for both B. C. and Holy Cross.

The football team is well represented in the [illegible] James J. Doyle, left guard, being vice-president. Eddie Fox, first [illegible] guard and leader of the [illegible] is vice-president and chairman of the dance committee.

Thirty-five candidates have turned out for the Boston University swimming team, which Edward Duffy has been [illegible] Duffy captained [illegible] swimmers in 1912-13 [illegible]

Negotiations are under way for meets with Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, Technology, Wesleyan and Williams. The team is entering the New England Intercollegiate [illegible]

WHITMAN ATHLETE INJURED IN GAME

Whitman, Dec. 2.—Franklin H. Norton, fullback of the Whitman A. A. football team seriously injured in the game with the [illegible] team last week, has become a patient in a sanitarium.

After a gruelling contest young Norton returned to his home Saturday apparently all right. His condition has [illegible] and a course of treatment at an institution was prescribed. Norton is one of the most popular athletes of the town.

BUNKER HILL QUINTET BESTS NEWBURYPORT

Haverhill May Go to Sunny South

Haverhill, Dec. 2.—The Haverhill High football champions will probably play Duvall High eleven of Jacksonville, the undefeated champions of Florida. The Duvall management telegraphed asking that Haverhill send the amount of guarantees desired and the record entitling the team to the New England laurels. This has been done and a reply closing the game is expected.

The Florida management suggested as a date, December 11, which is agreeable to Haverhill High. If plans go through, the Haverhill squad will leave for the South early next week.

PURPLE LINEUP STILL IN AIR

Holy Cross Candidates Still in Battle for Honor of Starting Big Game

Worcester, Dec. 2.—Holy Cross football fans are inclined to take lightly reports coming from Boston about injuries to Boston College stars. They can't figure out why B. C. should be so confident of victory if Fitzpatrick is out of the game, Swan's shoulder wounded and Kennedy forced to keep to the sidelines.

On the other hand, Holy Cross reports everything rosy. After a two-weeks' lay off every Purple player will be ready to give his best against the enemy. Not a real injury is apparent in the entire squad.

The only question at Mount St. James is as to what players will start in several positions, so closely are some of the men matched in ability. Evans, Hoopel and Wallingford are still trying for fullback; McGrath, Nyland and La Plante are fighting for the tackle berth opposite Captain Conway. Golembeskie is making a great bid to win an end from Brannon or Young, or else to make a tackle position. These are a few of the uncertainties even now perplexing Coach O'Donnell.

Holy Cross rooters expect the battle between Heaphy and Gildea at centre to be as good as the game itself. Gildea made one All-American centre, Alexander of Syracuse, look bad this year in Worcester, and showed up well against Heaphy last year.

Tomorrow Holy Cross "night" will be the big event and Chief Marshal Tom [illegible] is looking forward to the most successful gathering in Purple history. Coach O'Donnell, as usual, wears his non-committal smile, the same smile that presaged the victory over Syracuse.

Purple fans are glad that Coach Cavanaugh's son, David, has passed the crisis in his pneumonia attack at St. Vincent's Hospital here. They say Cav will have nothing but football on his mind now.

Every day is practice day for Holy Cross. The Purple squad is putting in about four and a half hours daily. Lengthy signal practice is followed by a brief scrimmage with the Yannigans. The schedule was carried through yesterday in a heavy rain.

Little Hope for Gipp of Notre Dame

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 2.—George Gipp, famous Notre Dame football star, is failing rapidly and little hope is held out for his recovery, according to a bulletin issued from St. Joseph's Hospital. Gipp has been unconscious for most of the past forty-eight hours. He is suffering from pneumonia.

YALE PASSES UP TILT WITH B. C.

Gives Up Policy of Meeting a Team Until It Has Gained Victory

General regret, as well as indignation, was expressed by Boston College rooters today about the dropping of the Maroon and Gold eleven from the Yale schedule. It has been such a generally accepted Yale custom to play return engagements with teams that conquer her that a [illegible] was expected, even in the face of continued reports from New Haven.

That Yale has come to realize that the Boston team is [illegible] is the general impression. The reason given for the move—"arranging a consistently developed schedule"—is taken to mask the fact that the New Haven authorities in their efforts to pull Yale out of the slough of defeat, are afraid that the pairing could hardly be accomplished with the Boston obstacle in the way.

There is no [illegible] that the game was called off for any roughness, or [illegible] features. In the two defeats suffered by Yale at the hands of Boston [illegible] two years, several Yale [illegible] were injured but it was [illegible] by experts who [illegible] that [illegible]

This game was becoming one of the annual football features [illegible] part of the world and [illegible] is necessary [illegible] regret. But the [illegible] announce that arrangements are already under way to [illegible] with some of the big teams of the country that will more than fill [illegible]

Among [illegible] Manager [illegible] with Pittsburgh [illegible] Not a [illegible] definitely [illegible] and it is [illegible] local management [illegible] the games to Boston. At present there are two open dates on the [illegible] schedule, October 21 and [illegible] chances are that both will be filled with real major league contests.

There is a general impression on University Heights that [illegible] of these teams encountered the B. C. juggernaut this season there would now be no question as to the East's leading eleven. As Boston loses but [illegible] regulars, Captain Urban and Fitzpatrick and [illegible] Cavanaugh is [illegible] up for [illegible] prospects for further glory are the brightest.

Players and Coach Refuse to Comment

The announcement from New Haven arrived yesterday and surprised coach and players generally. Though no one would comment on the matter.

In response to a wire from Frank A. Reynolds, graduate manager of athletics at B. C., Manager Stoddard of Yale football for 1921 sent the following telegram:

"Regret that in arranging a consistently developed schedule it has been found inadvisable to include game with Boston College."

The wire was sent after Reynolds on Tuesday dispatched the following to New Haven:

"Uncertainty as to certain games, important among which is Yale vs Boston College, renders schedule adjustment very difficult. Extremely important to ascertain whether Yale desires Boston College game for next season."

Boston University, Middlebury, Fordham, Georgetown, Marietta and Holy Cross are already on next year's schedule.

ALLEGED ROUGHNESS MAY CAUSE BREAK

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 2.—Trinity and Wesleyan are again at the parting of the ways in athletic relations. Wesleyan claims that at football this Fall their opponents resorted to rough tactics.

Trinity's alumni secretary has asked the Wesleyan senate to withhold action, and the latter has consented.

Is Marriage a Success?

THEY KNOW—THESE TWO.

To the Marriage Editor:

Every man and woman over twenty years old ought to try and find [illegible] and marry, or [illegible] love and [illegible] having a [illegible] family and a [illegible] of their own. With this [illegible] and [illegible] on both sides, [illegible] cases out of ten the couple [illegible] fifteen years [illegible]

My [illegible] and I [illegible] of the [illegible] We KNOW [illegible] Marriage [illegible] broadening effect on both sexes. It [illegible] with our fellow men's shortcomings. We see everything with a different [illegible] from the unmarried [illegible]

I [illegible] surely that my own children [illegible] marry before they reach [illegible] of bachelor unity [illegible] or [illegible]

How [illegible] it is to see nice good men and women thirty or thirty-five years old [illegible] unmarried [illegible] I have had a make a home and at least three children at thirty-five. My candid opinion is that no man or woman makes a successful marriage if they wait until forty.

MRS. R. G. LANESBORO

THE EVER-JEALOUS WIFE.

To the Marriage Editor:

I am much interested in the subject of marriage for I am one of its sufferers. Perhaps some one might be able to give me some advice after a brief outline of my case. I have been married nearly four years and we should be supremely happy. I am forty-six and she is forty-five. I earn, on the average, $150 to $200 a month. We have no children, a handsome bank account and no debts. We are both in perfect health. My wife is economical and as pure and true a woman as any in the world.

She has full charge of the exchequer and I tell her at all times that she may have anything she desires. I myself never carry over $1 in my pockets for car fare.

Eight years ago I used to go around quite a lot and knew a [illegible] women. My wife and I got acquainted at that time [illegible] I saw in her [illegible] I had never seen [illegible] and asked her to be my wife. We put our heads together and after two years of reasoning we were man and wife. I made a complete change in life and eliminated everybody and everything but my wife. No other woman interests me [illegible] of my love for her and [illegible] she has no confidence [illegible] window [illegible] we pass she swears she [illegible]

My wife is unhappy and so am I. And though I love her dearly my [illegible] Could someone tell me what to do?

C. L. S.

NO "BOSS" ANY MORE.

To the Marriage Editor:

I have been married five years and think I can use my own experience as an example because in that time all the joys and sorrows [illegible] and parcel of marriage have been [illegible]

Our courtship was [illegible] one, [illegible] two people [illegible] we had. As soon as we [illegible] married and [illegible] responsibilities [illegible] each of us wanted to be the "boss." Now, whoever heard of happiness in a home where there was a boss?

Matters went from bad to worse and at the end of six months a separation seemed the only way out of what had become an unbearable situation. One night, after having quarreled more than usual, I began packing my clothes preparing to end it [illegible]. A realization of the consequences of such an [illegible] suddenly came to both of us and husband [illegible] talk it over."

We did and came to the conclusion that married life, if taken as a business proposition and run on a fifty-fifty proposition with no "boss" but cooperation could be ideal. We [illegible] putting that decision into effect [illegible] the "I will be boss" days [illegible]. We picked up our life where we had left it on the honeymoon and [illegible] our friends call us an ideal couple. And we know that cooperation is the foundation for a permanent happiness and true love.

A CONTENTED WIFE.

AN IDEAL COUPLE.

To the Marriage Editor:

There would be fewer failures in marriage if the lovers would take time to consider what they will have to put up with when they are married. All is not roses. The expenses for two are not the same as for one, and this should be thoroughly understood, as it is money matters in very many cases that end the marriage in the divorce courts.

When we first married I was sixteen years and a half old and my husband was twenty-two years and a half. We were sure of our love for each other then and after almost twelve years of happiness we can truthfully say we are sure of our love now, too. He, being the older and wiser of the two gave me a certain amount of his salary for food and clothes, even more than necessary. Out of this I was to be paid for everything, and we always saved something [illegible] posted it in the bank.

As his salary increased so did my share and when our [illegible] grew bigger and bigger we allowed amply for them. We saved up enough to have a home of our own so that the greedy landlords don't bother us.

So much for money matters. Further, I think that if married people were more trustful, truthful and considerate of each other there would be many successful marriages as in my case. Never let the first quarrel over nothing kill the love you both were sure you had. Humble yourself and say you are "sorry." What is still better, do not let every little thing cause a quarrel. Do not say things to your husband you wouldn't want him to say to you.

RICKARD IS AFTER BIG BATTLE

Andy Chaney May Prove Stumbling Block in Path of Frenchman

New York, Dec. 2.—Joe Jacobs, manager of Benny Valgar, the French featherweight and conqueror of Johnny Kilbane, appeared at Madison Square Garden today and presented a plan to Tex Rickard whereby the featherweight situation might be cleared up.

Manager Jacobs agreed to sign Valgar to meet Andy Chaney for fifteen rounds to a decision at the Garden on December 21, also to sign articles that in the event of Valgar scoring a victory over Chaney, he will send the French "Flash" against Billy De Foe three weeks later.

Furthermore should Valgar come out victorious over De Foe, Manager Jacobs informed Rickard that he would force Kilbane to accept a titular contest with the sensational little French athlete or else force Johnny to retire and relinquish his title to Benny. Valgar also appeared at the Garden offices and was ready to post a forfeit of $1,000 for his scheduled contest with Andy Chaney on the 21st, the weight to be 126 pounds at 2 p. m. on the day of the contest.

If Rickard is unable to secure an opponent for Benny Leonard for this date, he will go through with the Valgar-Chaney contest. Valgar is ready to guarantee Kilbane a purse of $25,000 if he will engage in a fifteen round decision contest with him at the Garden in the near future.

The French star leaves for Boston in a few days to meet Jimmy Fruzeth, the New England lightweight champion.

SPORT EDITORIAL

A Toast to a Good Man

When the grandstands are rocking under the mad enthusiasm of the crowd as Ruth hits his home run in the ninth inning, or Horween smashes through to a touchdown; when Shevlin is swinging the finishing punch, and a wild mob storms the ring, breaking through benches and chairs, one man remains calm.

When the bitter wind is whipping across the field so cold that it chills the marrow and paralyzes the limbs; or the rain is pouring down, soaking through clothing, and dripping into the eyes, one man sits oblivious to the weather.

In the evening, or in the morning, you pick up your newspaper and read columns of descriptions of some great sporting event, and you may, occasionally, reflect that the reporter did fairly well under the circumstances.

But did you ever give a thought to the fellow who sits up yonder in the press stand beside the reporter, picking away at a telegraph key—to the telegraph operator?

There he sits, imperturbable in moments of the greatest excitement, scarcely looking up as sport history is passing under his very nose, his head slightly bent to catch the babble of hurried dictation, or taking hastily scrawled sheets of "copy" and deciphering the words by some occult method of his own, without interrupting the writer.

Sometimes he has to shield his instrument from the elements as best he can, often his hands are so stiff with cold that he can scarcely bend the fingers, and not infrequently, as darkness draws over the scene, he has to light matches to see the "copy."

We wish to arise at this time and propose a toast to that lonely figure trudging yonder through the fast gathering night, or out of the darkened hall, the first to arrive at the scene of action and the last of all the great crowd that there assembled to leave.

We drink, in grape juice, or carbonized water, or whatever else is to be had, to the long life and prosperity and happiness of a good man, the Western Union or the Postal Telegraph operator.

Bay State Refuses to Back New Golf Body

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

The Western Golf Association will find but little support, if any, in Massachusetts, when it attempts to introduce a new national golf association to the American public on January 15 at Chicago. Massachusetts club officials are satisfied with the manner in which the U. S. G. A. conducts its business, as are officials of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

There has only been one time in the history of the United States Golf Association when Massachusetts players were at serious odds with the national organization and that was when it declared Francis Ouimet to be a professional. This was in 1915 and 1916. The matter has long since been righted and since that date the U. S. G. A. has given no real cause for complaint.

Had the Western Association started a new national body during the period of the Ouimet argument it would very likely have been able to recruit a number of clubs in the Massachusetts district, but it is doubtful if at this time any one of the 72 clubs in the Massachusetts Golf Association will join the organization the Westerners hope to start on January 15.

Crack Amateurs With U. S. G. A.

Perhaps the most important item in the business of a national golf association is arranging for and conducting the national championships. The U. S. G. A. has always conducted these affairs in a splendid manner. If a second national association is formed it would undoubtedly hold championships and the United States would be placed in the amusing position of holding two national amateur and open championship tournaments in one year.

A new association, provided it furnished attractive money prizes, could draw a representative field for its open tournament, but from this distance it appears that any effort to hold a national amateur championship outside of the jurisdiction of the U. S. G. A. would be a fizzle. The amateur can only afford to devote one week to a national championship, and the stars would naturally seek the one conducted by the big body.

A glance over the list of the thirty-two golfers who qualified at the 1920 amateur at Roslyn indicates that practically every one would stick to the U. S. G. A. in the event of a split. It is likewise certain that any foreign golfers invading the United States would play in the championship of the U. S. G. A.

West Strong for Professional Tour

While the Westerners who seek to split the ranks of players are making a stake in that particular there is no denying that in backing movements for the development of competition the West is far more liberal than the East.

[illegible] Illustrated, which is conducting the campaign to raise funds to send the team of American professionals to St. Andrews next Spring for the British open championship, finds that Western clubs respond much more eagerly than those in any other sections. Clubs in the Middle West have volunteered to finance the tour without aid from "the effete East."

Returns from Massachusetts clubs have not been up to expectations. The Westerners claim, and not without much foundation, that Eastern golfers are "provincial."

ZBYSZKO AFTER TITLE MATCH

Giant Pole Will Challenge Champion if Successful in Gardini Bout

By JACK CONWAY.

Stanislaus Zbyszko, giant Polish wrestler, intends to challenge the winner of the Stecker-Lewis match if he is successful in his finish contest with Renato Gardini, world's lightweight champion, at Mechanics Building next Monday night. The show will be staged under the direction of Lou Daro.

Zbyszko is one of the [illegible] turesque of our wrestlers. He is a big, powerful fellow and [illegible] his tremendous strength and knowledge of the mat game to win his contests.

Gardini will pit his youth and speed against his rival's experience and strength. The Boston star is confident these assets will [illegible] the decision. [illegible] Gardini is eager to meet the winner of the Stecker-Lewis affair. It will be remembered that Gardini battled Stecker for two hours at the Revere Beach oval last Summer.

Promoter Daro has opened headquarters at the Little Building.

Sunday Sports and the Boxing Bill

The Sunday Sports bill and Boxing bill will go on the ballot for a referendum vote at the various city and town elections this month. When these measures were passed by the Legislature and later signed by Governor Coolidge they contained provisions which permitted the city fathers of the various municipalities to accept them up to the time of an election. Both measures must then be submitted to the voters.

The Sunday Sports bill permits amateur athletics between the hours of 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. on Sundays. The Boxing bill provides for a boxing commission to serve in the department of public safety. Governor Coolidge has already appointed a boxing commission which is operating in various cities and towns under temporary approval of city and town executive bodies. The voters now must now decide whether they want legalized boxing. Those communities which reject the boxing commission will not be permitted to stage even amateur bouts.

Eddie Shevlin Returns to Dartmouth Post

Eddie Shevlin, who has developed into one of our best little kayo punchers, returned to Hanover, N. H., today to resume his duties as boxing instructor at Dartmouth. The Roxbury man has taken part in four bouts in a month's time and is deserving of a rest. He will probably not box before January when he will be prepared to give battle to Nate Siegal.

Shevlin has a fine squad of boxing candidates at Dartmouth. They compare favorably with the boxing candidates at Harvard, Yale and Technology. The ring game has [illegible] a big boom in all of the colleges. This is due to the fact that it is being conducted on a sane basis as under the Boxing Commissions in Massachusetts and New York. Boxing received a wonderful impetus during the war when the Y. M. C. A., K. of C. and War Camp Recreation Department showed how men could be made healthy and self reliant when taught boxing under proper conditions.

All-Star Boxing Show at Quincy

There will be an all-star boxing show at Quincy tonight. [illegible] Salvo of Quincy will have Young Gould of Brockton as an opponent in the final bout of ten frames. Tommy Corbiery of Gloucester and Joe O'Connell of Brockton will collide in another ten-session affair. Bunch O'Neil of Lynn and Fred Roulard of Quincy will battle eight frames, as will Billy Shine of [illegible] and Syrian Kid.

BUGS BAER'S COLUMN

[illegible]

They have no use for the cowardly experts who rely on facts. The All American is a phantom eleven, with a ghostly schedule, and none but wraiths should play on it. Instead of Legendre, Urban, Keck, Gipp, Sonnenberg, Alexander, French, Davies [illegible] picked out of the Gypsy dream book.

Here's a real lineup for [illegible]:

The Flying Dutchman.
The Headless Horseman.
Hamlet's Papa.
Banquo's Ghost.
The Banshees.
The Cardiff Giant.
Perpetual Motion.
Santa Claus.
Last Year's Salary.
This Year's Salary.
Next Year's Salary.

[illegible] would tackle anything that ever paid an income tax.

The backfield, composed of Last Year's Salary, This Year's and the Next, would be the most elusive in the works. Nobody has ever caught up to 'em.

That settles the team for this year, but it breaks out again in 1921 in a different spot. If the spook outfit needs a playing field, let the Shipping Board buy it. Nobody will ever see that, either.

[illegible] Patterson [illegible] your umbrella.

After winning the championship of the League of Nations they would play Boston when the tents come down. All games played on Sundays under the Blue Law.

This is the All American for all time. Which doesn't seem strange. If you can pick a better eleven than that, you are entitled to [illegible].

GLEASON PREPARING TO REBUILD TEAM

Chicago, Dec. 2.—The White Sox will endeavor to rebuild the team, riddled by the loss of seven stars through the baseball scandal, at Waxahachie, Tex., which will be the training camp for 1921. Manager William Gleason will [illegible] camp the first week in March and will take about forty men, two-thirds of them recruits. Heretofore the team has left for its training camp about the middle of March but an earlier start will be made to give Gleason a longer period to rebuild the club.

The Past Reaches Forward

JENNIE caught the coping with [illegible] saved her from [illegible] for a moment [illegible] able [illegible] to answer [illegible] ears her [illegible] tremu[illegible]

"I fear [illegible] Mr. Holt."

Ah Jennie [illegible] Slim [illegible] cultivated [illegible] remarked [illegible] method of [illegible] old "[illegible] Black Jerry [illegible] more [illegible] Black Jerry."

She [illegible] at him. In his face was [illegible] able recognition. There was no [illegible] pretend longer.

"But if you knew me now, Slim," she said, "[illegible] why weren't you [illegible] first came to our [illegible]"

"[illegible] Well, that's easy [illegible] Kenneth Harrison [illegible] this afternoon he was [illegible] and asked me [illegible] party tonight [illegible] in the [illegible] My [illegible] then I [illegible] That's when I [illegible] when I stood there [illegible] really were [illegible] here tonight I wasn't [illegible] the [illegible] wasn't [illegible]"

"Yes," [illegible] said.

"[illegible] Jennie," he exclaimed. "You [illegible] a winner!—and you're right in with this classy bunch as though you were born there! The last I heard of you you had jumped your bail and had run away and no one knew where you were, and no one had ever heard from you. And now here you are! In the name of [illegible], how did you turn the trick?"

Briefly she outlined the past four years.

"But it must have taken dough, real dough, to have put that across," he said. "Who put up the dough?"

"Dad."

"Black Jerry! All of it?"

"[illegible]"

"And what's he making you now?" [illegible]

"[illegible] to say you're playing [illegible] game [illegible] what Black Jerry [illegible] a big game [illegible] one that"

"Yes."

He whistled softly. "Well, you or [illegible] Jerry may be [illegible] that you're long on nerve. Here's hoping you win out!"

"I can't—unless you promise not to tell on me."

"Oh, I'll never tell," he assured her.

"Thanks, Slim."

"Why should I tell?" he went on smiling frankly. "Even if I wanted to be a crook, what'd there be in it for me? You're going up—I can see that. I'd rather have a friend at the top than a friend at the bottom—where you'd be if my tongue got to running too free and easy. Sure, there'll never be a whisper or a sign from me, Jennie."

She thanked him again. [illegible] she asked how he had [illegible] so far in four years. He [illegible] his shoulders and smiled at her with [illegible] frankness.

"You know I never [illegible] myself, Jennie. I got up here because I'm a clever guy. And [illegible] because I've worked like hell. Yes, don't you forget it. I've worked like hell! But I've done it chiefly because I own a bean. I danced six months in [illegible] at first I thought it was [illegible]. Then I saw I would get nowhere unless I [illegible] I [illegible] to work. I saw [illegible] the stage was [illegible] of them. I decided that the [illegible] for me was to try to become the [illegible] straight dancer in America. [illegible] better than anybody else ever dreamed of doing it, more [illegible] to it, more refinement. I started out on that line—and believe me, Jennie, I sure worked. I took lessons as long as anybody could teach me anything. I practiced by myself, I worked out new ideas and new combinations. I got new partners for my act and let 'em out as fast as I got too good for them, and so I kept on getting better and better as a dancer. Am I knocking myself too hard, Jennie?"

"Please go on."

"And all the time," he continued, "I was looking out for other things. I made it my business to learn to dress like a gentleman and act like a gentleman. There are a lot of dames in this burg [illegible] dames all right who will privately take you on and teach you society manners and [illegible] and everything there is to know about how to behave with the ladies [illegible] Jennie, you wouldn't believe how much [illegible] I paid out to one of those dames, but I made her earn it, [illegible] and what I got was worth a hundred times what I paid. And as the result of it all," he [illegible] "here I am the delightful and [illegible] young gentleman you see."

"You're the one who has done wonders, Slim," she exclaimed.

"[illegible] for the flowers, Jennie, but [illegible] situation when I took [illegible] I've never advertised what I came from, but I've never tried to [illegible] it. The most I've done has been to twist my name a bit [illegible] that sounds better [illegible] stage. And here I am. [illegible] formerly of the Perkin [illegible] more dough than any other man in this line in the country and welcome any place I [illegible]. And some of the swells are real and would be trying to slip me [illegible] on the quiet to do as with [illegible] Funny, ain't it? But I'm not kidding myself in any way. I [illegible] this game [illegible] going to last forever [illegible] very truly [illegible] up while the suckers are falling for my graft."

[illegible] with a side[illegible] "[illegible] you and Kenneth Harrison seem to be friends. You're [illegible] trying to put anything [illegible] on him—anything crooked, I mean?"

"[illegible] partner?"

"[illegible] was a piece of the show [illegible] He plays with the show business on the side quite a [illegible]. Also we're in two or three other deals together. I—naturally he [illegible] now and then. [illegible] worry, [illegible] Miss M[illegible] when I met [illegible] my life to-[illegible]"

After a [illegible] they turned away [illegible] Slim whispered [illegible] of that she re[illegible] had [illegible] in the [illegible] that little M[illegible] had taught her. And [illegible] though Slim was to look at [illegible] was an even greater [illegible] as a partner—no wonder women of smart society were [illegible] to exchange [illegible] large sums for a dance or so with him. Jennie forgot herself; dancing with Slim was like being a strain of exquisite music like being a string wind.

He swung her back to the wall they had just left, and faced her, his eyes eager. "Jennie, you're the real goods!" he said excitedly. "You're my next partner—professional partner, I mean."

"But, Slim—" she began amazed.

What the Story Is About

How Jenny, the daughter of Black Jerry Malone, the keeper of a low dance hall in New York, was rescued in the very nick of time from her environment and introduced to exclusive New York society through the influence of a former crook is the thrilling basis of this new story, by the author of "Mary Regan." The novel tells mainly of her adventures in the second of the two worlds through which her amazing career takes her, where reminders of her past appear, and the result is many thrilling and dramatic episodes.

"[illegible] want to spring [illegible] You're [illegible] But after some private work with me you'd be great."

Your Present Partner

"[illegible] your present partner?"

"Doris Dorraine!" he sniffed. "[illegible] does not have the real class. You saw that yourself tonight. And then [illegible] may drop out of the game any time and leave me [illegible]. There are too many men in her young life. [illegible] But you, Jennie, you have got everything! You can name your own terms—only you've got to come in! We'll show this old town something it's never seen before!"

As she listened to his excited speech and gazed into his eager face, a sense of there being something familiar about this scene came upon her. And then she remembered. On the night she had last seen Slim he had made her this same proposal.

And her answer was in substance now the same. "[illegible] wonderful [illegible] offering [illegible] Slim—but there's something else I want to do."

He nodded over at their table. "You mean you're going up with that bunch?"

"I don't know, Slim—I don't know [illegible]. But it's something else I want to do. I'm quite definite that it's [illegible] else."

The ex[illegible] faded from his face. He gazed at her thoughtfully [illegible] then he smiled.

"[illegible] giving the idea up, Jennie. But it might somehow work [illegible] as a [illegible] business proposition after you had [illegible] landed high [illegible]. I'm not going to bother you about it any more—but just you remember, I'm not giving [illegible] idea up." And then he [illegible] "Nor of [illegible] you either"—and then [illegible] Come on, we'd better get back to the others."

But even as he started to lead her away he checked her. "Hello, there's another of your old friends!" he exclaimed. "No—two more!"

"Who?" she breathed sharply.

"Harry Edwards—remember him? And with him Uncle George. At a table in the far corner, just behind you."

She cautiously glanced around. First she saw Uncle George, arrayed as never were the lilies of the field, for Uncle George, in this uptown country that he called home, believed in tailors and jewelers and haberdashers and all their tribe. And then she saw Harry; he also was in evening dress, though his garments were of a lesser glory. There was a disorder in his appearance which suggested a disorder in his mind. That disorder might have been augmented by a glass which stood beside his elbow—by that glass, its predecessors and its kin.

So much of detail her quick eyes noted, even though the chief, almost the only, thing she saw were Harry's eyes staring straight at her. They seemed wild eyes to her.

"Come on, Slim—let's get back," she breathed quickly. She went into his arms; they swung through the crowd, and a few moments later they were again at their table.

"I say, Miss Miller," cried Kenneth enthusiastically, "you know you are a wonder! I had no idea you were such a dancer! Jackson himself hasn't much on you. And the next dance is mine—and remember, you're not to be any little Quakeress such as you were when you danced with me the first time."

And when he stood up, she could but accede, though a quick glance showed Harry Edwards' gaze still fixed upon her; a glower it now was. She tried to dance as spontaneously as she had with Slim, and she drew from Kenneth unstinted praise; but though she was smiling into his face she hardly heard his words—she was always conscious of the eyes of Harry Edwards.

When she once more seated herself at their table, Slim handed her a folded paper, remarking, "A waiter left that for you, Miss Miller." She opened it; it was a sheet torn from a wine-list, and across it was pencilled:

I want to see you. Come to see me—or I'll come to see you.

It was unsigned, but there was no need for signature; she knew the writing. She sensed danger—great danger—though she did not foresee its shape. She thought rapidly, then leaned toward Slim.

"Please ask me for the dance after this," she whispered.

He did so. "Dance over toward Harry Edwards," she said when they were on the floor, "appear to recognize him and Uncle George as old friends, stop to speak to them and then pretend to introduce me."

"What's all that bunk for? Who's to be fooled?"

"The people we've just left. I've got to speak to Harry."

Caught His Cue

Slim guided her to where the two men sat—seemed to see them for the first time—went through the show of introducing Jennie. Uncle George, instantly caught his cue, and bowed gravely and with very fine dignity over her hand. But beneath his breath he said:

"Jennie, you've got 'em all outlooked by a thousand miles! You're going great, Jennie. You're going great—and you're only half-started!"

But Harry Edwards paid no heed to cues. His inflamed eyes blazed wildly at Jennie.

"What's all this fool acting for?" he demanded.

"Now—now, better come on home, Harry," urged Uncle George.

"I'll not go home!"

"Harry—Harry," expostulated the old man in a low voice, "don't make a young fool of yourself!"

"You leave me alone, Uncle George—this is my business!" Fortunately no one was within a dozen feet of them and the dance music swallowed their voices. "Jennie," he cried thickly, "I'm not going to stand all this any longer!"

"Harry, you've been drinking," she accused.

"Well, what if I have!"

"And you've been following me tonight!"

"Well, what if I have!" he cried. "Yes," he added, "I have been following you. I overheard Harrison at the office today arrange for this party, and I knew where you were going to be. I've seen you and Kenneth Harrison together all night—and I'm not going to stand for it! Yes, I've followed you! Now what are you going to do about it?"

She perceived that drink had inflamed his jealousy to the point of recklessness. She tried to speak soothingly, and at the same time to seek the purpose in his mad brain.

"The question is Harry, what are you going to do?"

"What am I going to do? Here's what I'm going to do!" he cried savagely in his muddled mixture of fury and love, looming menacingly above her. "I've been waiting four years for you—hoping!—but now I see I've got no chance so long as you can stick it out among those swells. If you were who you really are, on your own level, then I might have some chance with you. I'm going to have that chance—you understand! I'm going to tell those people, everybody, just who you are!"

There was insane determination in his deep-breathing figure, in his flushed, tense face; she saw that arguing with him would avail her nothing. And she saw how logical and simple and effective his announced purpose seemed to his frenzied brain: if she were torn down then she would have him.

And just as she realized the magnitude of the danger he represented—she did that the instant his last word passed his lips—she glimpsed Kenneth Harrison making a determined way toward them. Again there rushed upon her the dizzy feeling that all was over.

"For God's sake, Harry, get out of this!" urged Uncle George.

"I stick right here," returned Harry.

Uncle George stepped quickly forward to intercept the approaching Kenneth Harrison. He held out his hand, smiling.

"Hello, Kenneth. Nice of you to come over to visit an old tramp." He took Kenneth's arm. "Listen—there's something I been wanting to tell you. Just step over here for a minute."

But Uncle George's attempted intervention met with instant failure. "Not now, Uncle George"—here in his own world every one knew Uncle George, and knew him by no other name. Kenneth freed himself and turned quickly upon Harry.

"What's this mean, Edwards?" he said sharply.

"What's this mean?" Harry repeated, glaring belligerently. There was a moment's pause, with the two men facing each other. Then Harry exploded. "It means that——"

But even while Jennie seemed reeling to instant destruction, her wits were at work. They spoke up swiftly of their own accord, interrupting Harry—and her body moved swiftly between the two men.

"Mr. Holt had just introduced me to his friends," she explained, "and Mr. Edwards had just asked me to dance with him and I had just promised. Shall we try it, Mr. Edwards?"

As she finished, she slipped her right hand into Harry's left, laid her own left upon his shoulder, fell instantly into step with the music and started away. Automatically his right hand went to her waist and they were dancing.

"Harry," she said quietly, gently, almost as if explaining things to herself, "I don't think you've been quite yourself tonight. And I think it's been chiefly because you've been drinking. You never did drink much or often, so it's affected you all the more. I think that was what was the matter with you, Harry."

"That's only part of it, Jennie!" he burst out, with a groan—and she then knew that the fierce tensity in him was broken. "I've been waiting four years for you, loving you all the time. And when I saw you with Kenneth Harrison—with him when I didn't dare be with you—and when I saw the way he looked at you in the theatre and the way he looked at you up here—I—I—oh, it was just jealousy, Jennie!"

"But, Harry, Kenneth Harrison—"

"Perhaps I wouldn't have minded it so much," he rushed on, "if I didn't feel that Kenneth Harrison, for all his nice ways, wasn't—well, exactly all he should be. He's not good enough for you, Jennie! He's—no, I shouldn't be saying anything against him; I know nothing of my own knowledge. Yes, I think I would have minded it just the same whoever the other man was."

"But, Harry," she said in her quiet voice, "I hardly know Kenneth Harrison. It's his sister that I know—that's my friend. I don't care anything about him, and he's hardly seen me more than twice—so how can he care about me? It's just something you're dreaming, Harry."

"I'm not so sure of that," he returned. The orchestra had just stopped, leaving them near the entrance to the roof. There was dumb misery and longing in his eyes. "I really lost myself awhile ago, Jennie," he said humbly; "I had just one desire, to pull you down. I want you, Jennie—I shall always want you—and I'm going to try to get you—but I shall never again try to get you that way. You have nothing to fear from me, Jennie—nothing at all. And now, I'm not going to take you back to your friends. I—I can't. Good-night."

Before she had recovered herself sufficiently to start away, Kenneth Harrison was beside her. "He acted mighty queer—Edwards," Kenneth said, with a curiosity in which there was a bit of anger. "What was the matter with him?"

"Mr. Edwards did act queer," she agreed. "It must have been because he had been drinking. I thought it better to dance with him than to have a scene."

"Of course." Her watchful eyes saw that her explanation was ample—that he had no suspicions. "If he had been impertinent, I'd have had him fired out of the firm—even though he does have the backing of a strong interest, and even though he is getting to be a valuable man."

Jennie did not reply. A little later, homeward-bound in Kenneth's motor, beneath the surface chatter she thought dazedly about that evening. She was on the upgrade, yes; but the strange part was how her old life seemed to be coming forward and merging itself with her new—how two of the persons, both lovers in a way, she had thought she had left behind in the past, had that night strangely reentered her life. And she foresaw that both Harry and Slim Jackson would in some way touch her future. As to that future, she felt quite secure; both had promised to keep her secret.

And then, suddenly—it seemed to spring from nowhere, but perhaps it was the working of subconscious logic—her mind had only one thought, her father. Would he, too, emerge from the past and become an active presence in her life? That could hardly be any more unexpected than what had happened that night. If he did, when might it come and how?

The first step necessary [illegible] training of a child's subliminal [illegible] subconscious mind is to have him form the habit of tarrying over his tops and playthings to study their meaning, to discover for himself their possibilities and to invent ways of adapting them to his needs.

The modern tendency is to give the child too many toys, to allow him to see too much in a given hour, to hurry him from one situation to another. As a result of this rushing of the mind the baby [illegible] falls into the habit of de[illegible] things rather than ideas to stimulate his thoughts and his deeds.

The tremendous gain to the individual is here seen at once when we observe how dependent the nonreflective child becomes. [illegible] and rap[illegible] [illegible] and the reflective type of child [illegible] ideas—this child is a "self-starter."

When the Winter winds whip color into the cheeks of a vivacious brunette, what is more delightful than a hat of deep raspberry duvetyn?

A hat of this type recently accompanied a squirrel sport coat and linked itself to the wrap by embroidering its surface in squirrel color angora wool. It was one of those tam affairs that one can pull on in such a hurry, fluff her hair a bit, adjust her hat and look ever so dashing.

For general wear, if becoming, there is nothing more striking than a tailored sailor of hatter's plush, banded in gros-grain. But a hat of this type must be of the most excellent quality if it would be smart.

When a Girl Marries

Romantic Serial by a Noted Author

LANE CROSBY started for the Northwest [illegible] days after Father Andrew and Uncle Ned began their trip. By that time Val was up and about and her hands needed only light bandages at night. Poor little Lucy Willoughby, however, did not fare so well. The shock and terror of the accident had unnerved her and the burn that ran across her left temple and cheek weakened her with pain. The [illegible] flash [illegible] the lash of terror lest she be disfigured for life made the [illegible]

So Aunt Mollie took matters into her own hands [illegible] cottage in [illegible] pine woods for a month and transplanted the twins in a [illegible].

On the very day that Aunt Mollie staged her exodus Phoebe came bounding home with a plan that set her delirious with joy. Carlotta was going off to an old bungalow belonging to the Sturges family and [illegible] had invited Phoebe to come along and share her fortnight's vacation.

"What makes [illegible] perfect," an[illegible] Phoebe, "is that Neal's to [illegible] with some nice farm people Ca[illegible] own ever since [illegible] was a [illegible]. Now, don't say [illegible], Anne."

"I say you must," I laughed. "It's just the thing for all of you. I never knew a friendship of which I more thoroughly approved than yours and Carlotta's. Her courage and strength are [illegible] for you, and your sweetness and gentleness are just as good for her."

"I suppose [illegible]," Phoebe [illegible] absently minded [illegible]. "[illegible] may I go phone Neal [illegible] then start packing?"

"Run along, baby," I said, rejoicing because Phoebe and Neal were to have their little moments of happiness no matter what pain the future held.

A Compliment to Neal

"Then the phone rang, and when I answered, Virginia's voice came over it filled with the good will toward life she seems always to express nowadays.

"Anne, dear," she said, "that thoughtful young brother of yours just telephoned for my sanction to his visiting a farmhouse in the neighborhood while Phoebe spends the next fortnight with Carlotta Sturges. Of course the old dragon guardian had no reason for refusing, but it delighted her that the nice boy paid her the compliment of consulting her."

"Neal is a dear, isn't he?" I asked, Virginia's satisfaction communicating itself to me.

"He is, and a member of a delightful family!" laughed Jeanie, "But Anne, I didn't telephone to rave over the Lees and the Hylands but to ask Anne of the tribe of Lee to pack up herself and [illegible] her and spend the next fortnight out here at Dreamwold. How about it?"

"Oh, Jeanie!" I cried in delight. "I'd love it! Are you sure you want us—that we won't be interrupting the honeymoon?"

"You'll [illegible] adding spice to the love feast," replied Jeanie with a reassuring touch of her old malice. "[illegible] suit Jim. Just pack him up and put him in the car and let Lyons do the rest. I'll count on you for dinner tomorrow night."

"Count away," I said. "We'll be there to make your 'two plus two equals four' come true. Goodby, dear, and watch me hug you when I get where I can say a good old-fashioned thank you."

Then I hung up the receiver and ran in to tell Phoebe that she wasn't the only member of the family to go a-holidaying. But in the midst of my very first gloat I thought of Val.

I couldn't go off like this and leave her alone with everyone near and dear to her out of town. So I called Virginia back and explained to her. Virginia amiably and lazily told me to include Val—to include the whole town if I had [illegible] to arrive in time for 7 o'clock dinner tomorrow night.

And Val Surrenders

With a mixture of triumph and regret I hurried to Val's apartment to offer the invitation that made our own holiday decently possible.

Val looked at me steadily for a moment, her long eyes seeming to watch and consider.

"Why are you suddenly so considerate of me?" she asked in her creamy voice. "You don't really like me nor approve of me, Anne. Do you force yourself to be so decent to me because it's your pose to befriend—the needy? Or are you almighty fond of Lane?"

"Val," I cried, "why do you fling a bit of neighborly kindness in my face with a barb or two attached? We're neighbors. Our husbands and families are friends. And aren't we pretty good pals—even if we haven't precisely the same outlook on life?"

"The same outlook on life!" Val flung the words at me with a chuckle to spice them. "You're a Puritan, Anne. You like to look at life under a microscope, but you've no desire to live it. Heigho! Keep your microscope, old dear. It would bore me. Or disappoint me. Everything does—and so does everybody, including your righteous self and my—most unrighteous one."

"Good stuff!" I ventured. "And now that the first page of your epigramatic play is spread before my eye—how about Virginia's invitation?"

"Oh, yes—Virginia's invitation?" Val appeared to be weighing it for a minute or two. She closed her eyes wearily, leaned back among the cushions of her couch and swung her slipper from the toe of a cobwebby stocking.

"No—on the whole I won't come," she replied at last, opening her eyes to fix them on me with bright malice. "Aunt Mollie has asked me to visit her and the Willoughby twins at their cottage in the pines. I won't be along. So if that was what worried you, you can just go off and forget me."

"Val, come with us," I found myself crying with unexpected fervor. "I'd like to know the real you—the you who saved Lucy Willoughby, the quick-acting, straight-thinking, brave you who bathed her hands in fire to save that little—sparrow."

Val laughed, but her eyes were misty for a second, not hard and Oriental. Crimson stained the cream of her cheeks, and she held her hand out to me with an impulsive gesture.

"I'll go," she said. "I'll go. You make me think perhaps I am brave—and steady."

To Be Continued.

Danger of Plants in Bedroom

Bedrooms should not contain flowers or plants, particularly over night. Carbonic acid gas, the poisonous gas which is given out in the exhalation of humans, is evolved from the colored parts of flowers both by night and day, and from the green parts in addition at night. It is therefore the part of wisdom to recognize this fact. It is pleasant to have flowers in a guest room, but for the reason just set forth they should not remain in the sleeping chamber. The way to get around the difficulty is by the use of a window-box.—In December Good Housekeeping.

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

By HELEN ROWLAND

REPARTEE: A gallon of words to a spoonful of thoughts.

There is as much difference between truly loving and just "being in love," as there is between being good and "getting religion."

Marriage is the door by which a woman escapes from work, from spinsterhood, from loneliness; by which a man escapes from himself—or from a lot of other women. If you want to see the bright side of it, stop thinking of what you are going to get by marrying, and begin thinking of what you are going to escape.

It takes one woman twenty years to bring up her son—and another woman all the rest of his life to bring him down a little.

What a man doesn't know may not trouble him; but what a woman doesn't know causes her untold agony, until she finds it out.

Sometimes it seems to a woman that the only way to get any flattery or flowers from her husband is to lie down and die.

Some men are born for marriage; some achieve marriage; but all of them live in the deadly fear that marriage is going to be thrust upon them.

The thing that first shocks and then wearies a man about marriage is the discovery that a woman expects him to "win" her all over again every day.

When woman invented clothes, she invented romance; and every time she cuts her frock an inch lower, or trims her skirts an inch higher, she parts with a little bit more of the illusion and mystery, on which a man's dreams are built.

The trouble in most unhappy marriages is that the man expects too much—and the woman suspects too much.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

IN truth, I am fond of this season, I adore Autumn leaves and so forth; I chuckle without rhyme or reason when the wind's blowing down from the north. It seems to be nothing but folly to speak in lugubrious way and label the Fall "melancholy," and a time when nobody is gay. For myself, I am mirthful and merry as I welcome the season I love, and joy lasts until Wife says: "Dearie, I want you to put up a stove!" Then my visions of poesy perish, I forget all the fast-changing hues, and I ask you what art can I cherish while I'm busily cleaning out flues? And what can I note of Fall's beauty or the glow of her wonderful shades when I'm shining up stove pipe that's sooty till I'm black as the black ace of spades? Oh, it sets me to deep cogitation and I hanker to cut loose and rove; I consider a long separation when Wife cries: "Come, put up the stove!" When the breezes begin to get snappy, I'm at peace with the whole human race, and I feel I could always be happy till Wife says: "Put the stoves in their place!"

The News World in Pictures and Another Quintet of "Loveliest Girls"

ANNA MILBS, Lonsdale, R. I.

MARJORIE MAGINNIS, Cambridge

LUCRETIA P. HATFIELD, Cambridge

MARIE V. MAGINNIS, Dorchester

MRS. ETHEL BISHOP, Everett

THE BOSTON AMERICAN offers $5,000 in gold for photographs of lovely girls. To the girl declared by the judges to be the loveliest girl in New England, the American will pay $3,000 in gold. To the next girl in merit, $1,000 in gold. There will be two third prizes of $500 each. In awarding the prizes the judges will have in mind Arthur Brisbane's definition of beauty. Mr. Brisbane says beauty is "intelligence in a fine setting." The judges will study the photographs, first for intelligence, second for health, and third for physical beauty. There are no strings attached. Just send in the photograph of your wife, sweetheart, sister or friend. All photographs will be given careful treatment and will be returned when the contest is over. Address all mail to "Loveliest Girl Editor," Boston American, P. O. Box 239, Boston 9, Mass.

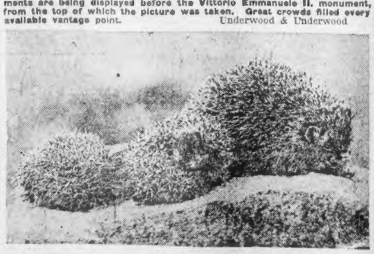
WHAT THE TANK TAUGHT. The ability of the tanks in the late war to get over rough ground with speed has resulted in the French Army devising a tractor and gun carriage which seats 24 soldiers and carries accessories for handling the guns. Other tractors carry the huge guns themselves. Neither snow, nor ice, nor hill, nor wood interferes with this vehicle of Mars getting to its destination. —(c) Kadel & Herbert.



SAND BURS? Nope. Hedgehogs. The revival in England of the gypsy custom of eating hedgehog meat has caused much opposition from people who know the worth of the hedgehog as a friend of the gardener. He does much good and no harm and is a very decent little chap personally. He makes excellent meat when cooked and is also appetizing in soup or broth. So his future is very uncertain. —(c) Kadel & Herbert

CHICAGO'S HEALTHIEST BABIES. At a recent contest conducted by the Chicago Herald and Examiner, 12,045 youngsters under the age of five years were examined and Robert Beech, 3 years 4 months, and Jayne Wheeler, just 3 years, carried off honors. Jayne's first prize money of $1,000 was deposited in her name to be drawn out in ten years with accrued interest. Robert got $500. Both babies are "All American." —(c) International

"Isn't it wonderful how happy they are, and with what simple pleasures they are satisfied! I often come over here on Saturdays and Sundays, just to talk to them."

"Talk to them!" he echoed stupidly. "In their own languages?"

"Oh, I know a little German and Italian, though I can't lay claim to Czech," she answered gayly. "Why are you so surprised that I should possess such modest accomplishments?"

"It's not the accomplishments." He hesitated.

"No. You are surprised that I should be interested in humanity." She stood facing him. "Well, I am," she said, half humorously, half defiantly. "I believe I am more interested in human beings than in anything else in the world—when they are natural, as these people are and when they will tell one of their joys and their troubles and their opinions."

Enthusiasm, self-assertion, had as usual, transformed her, and he saw the color glowing under her olive skin. Was she accusing him of a lack of frankness?

"And why," he asked, collecting himself, "did you think—" he got no further.

"It's because you have an idea that I'm a selfish Epicurean, if that isn't tautology—because I'm interested in a form of art, the rest of the world can go hang. You have a prejudice against artists. I wish I really were one, but I'm not."

This speech contained so many surprises for him that he scarcely knew how to answer it.

"Give me a little time," he begged, "and perhaps I'll get over my prejudices. The worst of them, at any rate. You are helping me to do so." He tried to speak lightly, but his tone was more serious in the next sentence. "It seems to me personally that you have proved your concern for your fellow creatures."

Her color grew deeper, her manner changed.

"That gives me the opportunity to say something I have hoped to say, ever since I saw you. I hoped I should see you again."

"You are not going away soon?" he exclaimed.

The words were spoken before he grasped their signficance.

"Not at once. I don't know how long I shall stay," she answered hurriedly, intent upon what was in her mind. "I have thought a great deal about what I said to you that afternoon, and I find it more than ever difficult to excuse myself. I shan't attempt to. I merely mean to ask you to forgive me."

"There is nothing to forgive," he assured her, under the influence of the feeling she had aroused.

"It's nice of you to say so, and to take it as you did—nicer than I can express. I am afraid I shall never learn to appreciate that there bay be other points of view toward life than my own. And I should have realized and sympathized with the difficulties of your position, and that you were doing your best under the circumstances."

"No," he exclaimed, "don't say that! Your other instinct was the truer one, if indeed you have really changed it—I don't believe you have." He smiled at her again. "You didn't hurt my feelings, you did me a service. I told you so at the time, and I meant it. And, more than that, I understood."

"You understood——?"

"You were not criticizing me, you were—what shall I say?—merely trying to iron out some of the inconsistencies of my own. I am profoundly grateful."

She gazed at him, puzzled. But he did not, he could not enlighten her. Some day she would discover what he meant.

"If so, I am glad," she said, in a low voice.

They were standing in the midst of the crowd that stronged the pavilion. An urchin caught hold of the rector's coat.

"Here he is! Say, Mr. Hodder, ain't you going to have any sody?"

"Certainly we are," he replied, returning Alison's faint smile. . . In the confusion that followed, he caught a glimpse of her talking to Mr. Bentley; and later, after he had taken her hand, his eyes followed her figure wending its way in the evening light through the groups toward Park street, and he saw above the tree-tops the red-tiled roof of the great house in which she was living, alone.

CHAPTER XV

I

For better or worse—John Hodder had flung his treasured beliefs into the crucible, and one by one he watched them crumble and consume away. None but his own soul knew what it cost him to make the test; and sometimes, in the early stages of it, he would cast down his book under the lamp and walk for hours in the night. Curiosity, and the despair of one who is lost impelled him to persist.

Hodder surveyed the ruins. And his mind recalled that Sunday of rain in New York which had been the turning-point in his life, when he had listened to the preacher, when he had walked the streets unmindful of the wet, led on by visions, racked by fears. And the same terror returned to him now after all the years of respite, tenfold increased, of falling in the sight of man from the topmost tower.

What was to become of him, now that the very driving power of life was gone? Where would he go? to what might he turn his hand, since all were vanity and illusion? Careers meant nothing, had any indeed been possible to a man forty, left staring at stark reality after the rainbow had vanished. Ninevah had mocked and conquered him who had thought himself a conqueror. Self flew back and swung on its central pivot and took command. His future, his fate, what was to become of him? Who else now was to be considered? And what was to restrain him from reaching out his hand to pluck the fruit which he desired?. . . .

II.

What control from the Unknown is this which now depresses and now releases the sensitive thing called the soul of man, and sends it upward again until the green light of hope shines through the surface water? He might have grown accustomed, Hodder thought, to the obscurity of the deeps; in which, after a while, the sharp agony of existence became dulled, the pressure benumbing. He was conscious himself, at such times, of no inner recuperation. Something drew him up, and he would find himself living again, at length to recognize the hand if not to comprehend the power.

The hand was Horace Bentley's.

What was the source of that serenity which shone on the face of his friend? Was it the light of faith? Faith in—what? Humanity, Mr. Bentley had told him on that first evening when they had met, faith in a world filled with cruelties, disillusionments, lies and cheats! On what authority was it based? Hodder never asked, and no word of theology ever crossed Mr. Bentley's lips; not by so much as a sign did he betray any knowledge he may have had of the drama taking place in Hodder's soul; no comment escaped him on the amazing anomalies of the life the rector was leading, in the church, but not of it.

It was only by degrees Hodder came to understand that no question would be asked, and the frequency of his visits to Dalton street increased. He directed his steps thither, sometimes hurriedly, as though pursued, as to a haven from a storm. And a haven it was indeed! At all hours of the day he came, and oftener in the night, in those first weeks, and if Mr. Bentley were not at home the very sight of the hospitable old darky brought surging up within him a sense of security, of relief; the library itself was filled with the peace of its owner. How many others had brought their troubles here, had been lightened on the very threshold of this sanctuary!

Gradually Hodder began to realize something of their numbers. Gradually, as he was drawn more and more into the network of the relationship of this extraordinary man,—nay, as he inevitably became a part of that network,—a period of bewilderment ensued. He found himself involved, and quite naturally, in unpremeditated activities, running errands, forming human ties on a human basis. No question was asked, no credentials demanded or rejected. Who he was made no difference—he was a friend of Horace Bentley's. He had less time to read, less time to think, to scan the veil of the future.

What he now mostly felt was relief, if not a faint self-congratulation that he had had the courage to go through with it, to know the worst. And he was conscious even, at times, of a faint reviving sense of freedom he had not known since the days at Bremerton. If the old dogmas were false, why should he regret them? He began to see that, once he had suspected their falsity, not to have investigated were to invite decay; and he pictured himself growing more unctuous, apologetic, plausible. He had, at any rate, escaped the more despicable fate, and if he went to pieces now it would be as a man, looking the facts in the face—not as a coward and a hypocrite.

MARTIAL LAW IN STRIKE LIKELY

Appointment of Mayor Pro-Tem Awaited in Virginia Mine Dispute

Williamson, Va., Dec. 2.—Unless the city commission of Williamson, centre of the Mingo County strike zone, can agree upon the selection of a Mayor pro-tem to take the place of Mayor W. O. Porter, now critically ill in a Cincinnati hospital, officers of United State troops stationed here said that the matter would be reported to Washington and that drastic martial law here would be the result.

Political differences deadlock the commission. Seven women are held in jail here charged with being undesirable persons.

Seventeen men, armed with high powered rifles, appeared opposite Matewan, on the Kentucky side of Tug River, and fired a number of shots into the town.

A detachment of United States troops was deployed from Matewan to repel the attacks, but no shots were fired, according to Captain Brine, U. S. intelligence officer.

A report reached here that Nathan Beavers, said to have shot and fatally wounded William Francis and seriously wounded Everett Dotson, near Vulcan, had been killed by officers who have been closely pursuing him with bloodhounds. Francis and Dotson were deputy sheriffs of Pike County, Ky.

Welcome to General Nivelle! Let Him Know the Truth

Boston is glad to receive General Nivelle, one of the greatest generals France has produced in this war, and that means one of the greatest generals the war has produced.

General Nivelle is especially welcome in America because he commanded the largest body of American troops under any foreign general.

We hope that he will like our country, and will like Boston especially. We hope that he will make shrewd observations of men and opinions and things in this country and will be able to go back to his country and report that the love and admiration we have always borne for France, and still bear for her, has been somewhat burdened in the last two years by the revelation of her newborn imperialistic ambitions, of her spirit of vindictiveness and her intrigues in Poland and Russia and her disposition to keep Europe embroiled. The France that we admired and respected was the France that ordered her troops ten miles back from her frontier lest accident might give Germany an excuse to make war.

France, just, peace-loving and kind, is a France armed with the friendship and respect of the whole world. France rattling the sabre all over Europe in the intoxication of military success is a France the world will look coldly at when trouble comes and will say to, "You have made your bed, now lie in it." France is not as robust as Germany, or as Russia, or as Great Britain. World sympathy means more to her than to these nations. Public opinion in America was overwhelmingly in favor of the Entente because France and ravished Belgium were of the Entente. But we hope that General Nivelle can carry back to France the word that if she persists in her present intrigues the sympathy of America will cease to be hers in a time, perhaps, of great need.

'Play With Us' Say France and England, but Play Our Way

It seems as if the angels had combined to prevent the people of the United States from making the woeful mistake of joining the League of Nations. For every day the evidence accumulates to prove the contention of those opposed to the league, that it is an unworkable and insincere disguise for an offensive and defensive alliance to protect France and Great Britain in the fruits of their imperialism, their stolen property in little nations. A few days ago it was Japan's refusal to submit the question of race equality to the league. Later, it was France's refusal to make public her offensive and defensive alliance with Belgium in accordance with that memorable principle of "open convenants openly arrived at."

More recently the newspapers announced that the representatives of the league and the representatives of the dominant nations of the league had quarreled over the settlement of the row between Poland and Lithuania. President Pilsudski of the Republic of Poland publicly threatened to resign unless the representations of the league and of its dominant members could be reconciled. THE REPRESENTATIVES OF THE LEAGUE, THEREFORE, WENT HOME, leaving the representatives of the dominant nations, the imperialistic nations France and England, in control of the situation.

Doubtless, France and England made a mistake in the men they caused to be selected to represent the league. The point, in any event, is clear. When, by mistake, the representatives of the league happen to disagree with the representatives of France and England in pursuit of some imperialistic scheme the representatives of the league have to give way.

Frank Goodwin Is a Good Public Official

We cannot help commending Mr. Frank A. Goodwin for the work he is doing as State registrar of motor vehicles with respect especially to removing the dangerous automobile drivers from the public highways.

He first established the policy of revoking the license of drivers who were convicted of operating recklessly. Then he recommended that the courts impose severe sentences upon offenders who were convicted of driving while under the influence of liquor. Having made up his mind that over 16,000 men and women who are now operating are incompetent to do so, he is determined to issue no more licenses to any applicant until the applicant shall have passed a rigid practical examination.

Now, of course, Mr. Goodwin is going to be very unpopular among all those who have been hit by his regulations. That is the fate of every public official who does his duty. But our citizens should more than offset this unpopularity by such an approval of faithful service as will make everybody in the public service appreciate that faithfulness is the best policy.

Render an Account of Thy Stewardship or Fail

Those who, like the Garland boys, are tempted to refuse a fortune because they believe that all men should start life at scratch ought to consider what they are accomplishing or failing to accomplish by merely refusing to take the fortune that they inherit. If, by refusing to take the fortune, they are leaving it in the hands of those who will squander it or use it purely for personal gratification or, worse still, use any part of it to defend and perpetuate inequalities of our present social system, then they do wrong to refuse the fortune. They could take their inheritance and then divest themselves of it by devoting it entirely to those uses which, according to their judgment, will best tend to bring about the state of society which they think is most just.

They could either keep it in their own control for this purpose or put it into the hands of trustees for this purpose. In any event it is better to make sure that the fortune is not going to non-social purposes.

To an Astrologer

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

NAY, seer, I do not doubt thy mystic lore,
Nor question that the tenor of my life,
Past, present and the future, is revealed
There in my horoscope. I do believe
That yon dead moon compels the haughty seas
To ebb and flow, and that my natal star
Stands like a stern-browed sentinel in space
And challenges events; nor lets one grief
Or joy, or failure, or success, pass on
To marr or bless my earthly lot, until
It proves its Karmic right to come to me.

All this I grant, but more than this I know!
Before the solar systems were conceived,
When nothing was but the unnamable,
My spirit lived, an atom of the Cause.
Through countless ages and in many forms
It has existed, ere it entered in
This human frame to serve its little day
Upon the earth. The deathless Me of me,
The spark from that great all-creative fire
Is part of that eternal source called God,
And mightier than the universe.
Why, he
Who knows, and knowing, never once forgets
The pedigree divine of his own soul,
Can conquer, shape and govern destiny
And use vast space as 'twere a board for chess
With stars for pawns; can change his horoscope
To suit his will; turn failure to success,
And from preordained sorrows harvest joy.

There is no puny planet, sun or moon,
Or zodiacal sign which can control
The God in us! If we bring that to bear
Upon events, we mold them to our wish;
'Tis when the infinite 'neath the finite gropes
That men are governed by their horoscopes.

More Truth Than Poetry

Pa Takes the Count.

By S. E. KISER

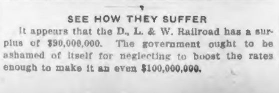
I GUESS that ma was out of luck
In pickin' pa for life;
She seems to think she's badly stuck
Because she is his wife.
We ain't been gittin' rich at all,
Like other people are;
Pa has an income that's too small
For us to keep a car.

"THERE must be something wrong with you,"
Ma said to pa one day;
"It's hard to keep from feelin' blue,
No matter what you say.
While other men make money fast,
You let your chances go;
We can't go proudly ridin' past
The folks we used to know.

"THERE'S shipping boards and mining rings,
And eggs and fruit and meat,
And rent and clothes and other things
To help make living sweet;
But you have let them all go by—
With chances everywhere,
You never seem to care to try
To be a millionaire.

"I CAN'T see why you haven't made
A fortune, like the rest;
You're just a failure, I'm afraid,
Believin' safety's best.
But other men have not been caught;
In spite of all the fuss,
They're hanging on to what they've got
And lookin' down at us."

PA looked as though he had been struck;
The wallop left him limp.
I guess that ma was out of luck
In choosing such a simp.



SEE HOW THEY SUFFER

It appears that the D., L. & W. Railroad has a surplus of $90,000,000. The government ought to be ashamed of itself for neglecting to boost the rates enough to make it an even $100,000,000.

Should Woman Propose?

SHALL woman propose to the man of her choice? The next Boston Sunday Advertiser will present a brilliant argument in the affirmative by a young unmarried woman writing under the pen name of Minerva Tarlow. It is full of new thoughts and striking epigrams. Based on woman's new-found political freedom, it is of especial appeal in a part of the country where the women outnumber the men.

Miss Tarlow says, among other things, that women are the acknowledged masters of men when it comes to shopping. They get the best bargains. Why not, she asks, let women do the shopping in the matrimonial market?

"Man has been profiteering in the rights of woman ever since the world began," she declares. "Woman, without personal liberty, is paying the forfeit for the privilege of living in a man's world.

"As long as woman is barred from the privilege of selection, to say that she is equal with man is a farce."

Miss Tarlow declares the solution of the whole marriage problem hinges on woman's untrammeled privilege of selecting her own mate.

What do you think?

Be sure to read Miss Tarlow's article. It will interest you mightily whether you agree with her or not.

FRIENDSHIP AND BORROWING

There is no surer way to lose a friend than to let a man's account get so big that he cannot pay it.

As soon as it reaches such dimensions he begins to be conscious of it, and, fearing that it may get around among his fellows, he begins to throw out little stabs and slurs about the man whom he fears may tell what he owes.

It is these debts which we cannot pay or which have assumed such proportions that they worry us which trouble the waters of friendship.

So the question arises which is kinder, to be exacting for prompt payment when the obligation is due, or so lenient that the one who owes can forget the obligation, even going on to make it bigger.

Teach your children that the man to whom they owe money has a right to it when it is due.

They should not expect something for nothing, and they should not go on making bills bigger unless they can figure to get them balanced when due.

Everyone wants friends and needs them, and the surest way to keep your friends is to pay your bills when due.

HE HAS a bulldog.
AN ENGLISH bull.
WITH A lower jaw.
THAT SHOWS its teeth.
AND HE has an idea.
THERE'S NO one else.
IN ALL the world.
BUT JUST his master.
AND ALWAYS.
WHEN A caller comes.
HE STICKS around.
AT HIS master's feet.
UNTIL HE'S sure.
IT'S A friendly call.
AND AFTER that.
HE'LL WAG his tail.
AND WADDLE off.
TO A friendly rug.
AND TAKE a nap.
AND YESTERDAY.
I CALLED on them.
AND HIS master's habit.
AND ALSO mine.
IS TO plague each other.
IN A joking way.
WITH SILLY things.
THAT SOUND unkind.
AND WHATEVER it was.
WE JOKED about.
IT DOESN'T matter.
BUT ANYWAY.
WE MADE pretense.
IT LED to blows.
AND I raised my hands.
AS THOUGH to strike.
AND THAT silly dog.
HE LEAPED right up.
AND GRABBED my sleeve.
AND HELD my arm.
AND GROWLED.
AND DIDN'T let go.
'TILL HIS his master laughed.
AND BADE him quit.
AND IT took us an hour.
TO CONVINCE the dog.
I'D MEANT no harm.
AND FOR a time.
IT REALLY looked.
AS THOUGH his master.
WOULD HAVE to kiss me.
JUST TO give assurance.
THAT WE were friends.
HE'S THE sort of a dog.
I'D LIKE to have.
FOR THOSE muscular friends.
WHO SLAP our backs.

I THANK you.

It Might Be Worse

THE frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock;
Darkness comes upon us early—it begins at 4 o'clock;
There's no bathing at the beaches, icy blasts are blowing now,
But not all the girls are wearing woolen stockings, anyhow.

MYSTERIES OF LOVE

A girl can love almost any man if she knows it will break some other girl's heart to lose him.

SALOON HAS GONE AND WILL NOT RETURN

By Rev. John Roach Stratton,
Pastor Calvary Baptist Church, New York City

VICTOR HUGO once said: "Progress is the stride of God." We might add to that: "And God never takes a stride backward."

The saloon will never "come back." The palavering politicians and the plutocratic profiteers of the whiskeybund are following the most forlorn hope that ever misled a group of anti-social plunderers.

The Principle of Progress

The rugged prophet, John the Baptist, forerunner of the Christ, said:

"The axe is laid unto the root of the trees. Every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire."

He there stated the fundamental principle of all moral progress and righteous reform. Whatever is helpful and useful to the human race must be safeguarded and preserved. Whatever is useless and harmful must be cut down and destroyed. To serve man, do good, to produce useful fruit; is the acid test that the race finally applies to every institution, every custom and every creed.

It was on this principle that duelling was stopped, slavery overthrown, the Louisiana lottery abolished, the international white slave traffic smashed, and prize fighting outlawed in every really cultured and civilized community.

The latest great stride of moral reform has been the driving out of the liquor traffic—the mightiest monster of them all.

Colossal Crime

This traffic was the most colossal and overshadowing crime of this enlightened century. It was a fountain-head of all iniquity and a mother of every vice. It was the destroyer of virtue, the seducer of youth, the disrupter of the home, the dissipator of economic wealth, and the chief enemy of the state, the church and the school. Going hand in hand with organized vice, and joining forces with greedy public utilities corporations, it debauched our politics—municipal, national and State. It was the mortal enemy of peace and order. As Henry Grady said:

"It is the demon that has dug more graves and sent more souls unshrived to judgment than all the pestilences that have wasted life since God sent the plagues to Egypt, and all the wars since Joshua stood beyond Jericho."

Too Long Spared

The wonder is that such an iniquity was so long tolerated by civilized society.

No power on earth or in hell can prevail to foist once more upon a civilized society the monstrous and iniquitous fraud which the sovereign will of the American people has slain in righteous wrath and buried in a grave so deep that it will never hear the trumpet on any resurrection morning.

THE TRAINED BLIND ARE ADEPTS IN BUSINESS

By Charles B. Hayes
Director, Division of the Blind, Mass. Department of Education.

OUT of the darkness of the Great War which has eclipsed the light of many eyes, is dawning a day of brightness and opportunity for the sightless. Today, as never before, interest is centring upon the work for the blind, and the opening up for them of wider fields of endeavor and usefulness better suited to their many talents and remarkable capabilities.

The old refrain, "pity the blind," naturally abhorrent to every spirited blind person, is being consigned forever to oblivion, and we are approaching a time when we shall all bow before the superiority of the trained blind whose achievements we may not hope to equal. There are 3,698 blind persons in Massachusetts, 27 per cent. of which are between the ages of 21 and 50.

As teachers of the sightless, the blind have already proved themselves the superiors of those who can see, and are proving their ability in every vocation which they are being trained to enter, and records show that they are today self-supporting in some forty different occupations.

This Winter the Harvard Graduate School has opened its doors for the higher education of the blind and for those who desire to become teachers in that field.

To place blind people successfully in new vocations and in direct competition with the seeing it is absolutely necessary to remove from the minds of the public the old prejudice that the blind are an afflicted class and cannot measure up to equal opportunities with the sighted. It has been suggested by some of the leading merchants of Greater Boston that a department controlled by the blind might easily be established in some of the leading department stores.

Boston is again leading off in this new venture which is to be fathered by the prominent business men of this city. It is probably the first experiment of its kind in America and will probably develop into a worldwide movement.

The plan is to have in each store some important department placed in charge of a trained blind person who shall be fitted to assume the responsibility and who shall receive adequate remuneration which such a position calls for. Blind persons filling these positions will be most carefully selected by the Division of the Blind, Department of Education and will receive definite education in salesmanship by Professor Harold Whitehead of Boston University.

It is thought that this will serve as a means to educate the public and will largely wipe out the thought of helplessness which the public ascribe to the blind.
